U. S. Freezes Iron, Steel Prices as Bar To Inflation

Henderson Agency Sets Cost at Level Of First Quarter; Study to Follow

First Major Order

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Acting swiftly to smash inflationary tendencies before they develop, Leon Henderson, defense price administrator, yesterday ordered a blanket freezing of all iron and steel prices at present levels.

In the first major price-fixing order of the new Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, Henderson forbade steelmakers to sell or offer their products at prices higher than those which have prevailed during the first quarter of the year.

The action, committing the Administration to a price-fixing policy in the key industry of defense more direct and binding than any attempted during NRA days, was seen as setting the pattern for an era of determined Federal control of business for the duration of the emergency.

The price of every other basic commodity would rise "inevitably" if steel prices increased, Henderson warned.

"Cooling-Off Period"

Steel manufacturers, who have agreed in the past week to raise wages about 15 per cent for an estimated 500,000 workers, had intimated that they would pass on part of the increased pay roll cost to consumers. In the price freezing order, which OPACS admitted was precipitated by the wage boost, Henderson forestalled this transfer.

Pointing out that a steel price increase at this time might touch off a general cost of living rise and "start the country off on the road to price inflation," Henderson promised that his agency would immediately begin a thorough study of prices and costs in the steel industry, and would adjust the price schedules if the facts indicate changes are necessary.

Henderson therefore characterized his action as a "cooling-off period" during which the effect of the defense program on the industry and on cost factors could be appraised. He added that the schedules should not be interpreted as "fixing summarily" a steel price ceiling for the duration of the emergency or even for any set period.

Element of Cost

"Steel is an element of cost," Henderson said, "in practically every item of the defense program. It is also an element of cost, direct or indirect, in virtually every item of civilian consumption. The market place looks to the price of steel as sheep look to the bell-wether.

"A rise in steel prices would inevitably be followed by rises in the prices of every other basic commodity. These increases would in turn be reflected in rising prices of manufactured goods. Presently the ultimate consumer would find that

'Disgraceful and Inhuman'

Sen. Smith Denounces Draft Board's Ruling on His Son

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, in a public announcement, yesterday assailed "character assassins . . . willing to damn the future of my son to crucify me" and denounced a local Selective Service Board, for lending "itself to a murderous assault."

Washington Selective Service Board No. 8 last Monday voted unanimously to defer only until the close of school Ellison D. Smith, jr., law school student and an attache of his father's Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

SENATOR SMITH

Young Smith, officials said, had sought classification in Class 2, to be deferred as a "necessary man" because of his job. Appearing with Government Appeal Agent Leonard Block a week earlier he had presented a letter signed by 12 members of Agriculture and Forestry Committee.

Col. Davis G. Arnold, chairman of Board No. 8, last night said he was at a loss to understand the Senator's comment on the selection board. "I wish he would express his charges in detail," he said.

Senator Smith's statement, which he telephoned to his office here, from his home, Lynchburg, S. C., declared "this persecution is particularly unjust" because his son had applied in April, 1939, for flight training as a Navy flying cadet. He had been rejected for lack of sufficient college credits, the legislator stated, "although I personally interceded for him."

The South Carolinian stated that when the Agriculture and Forestry Committee clerk resigned to take another position in May, 1940, young Smith was appointed as he was the "only one available familiar with

D. C. Hungers For Self-Rule, Senators Told

Capper Makes Appeal For Enfranchisement As Hearings Open

Like a blind man yearning for sight, residents of the Capital hunger for the chance to participate in national affairs, and for the opportunity to govern themselves, a Senate committee was told yesterday as the city's long fight for suffrage reopened on Capitol Hill.

The figure of speech was interposed by Paul Lesh of the Citizens Joint Committee for National Representation, at the first session of week-long hearings on the Capper-Sumners resolution before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee.

The resolution would amend the Federal Constitution to authbrize Congress to give the District representation in the Senate, House and Electoral College and to grant Washington residents some form of self-government.

Capper Makes Appeal

Other highlights of the hearing included a stirring appeal for enfranchisement of the District by Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, long an advocate of suffrage, and a warning from the subcommittee chairman, Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, of what he described as a danger of self-government in Washington.

Once a form of self-government is established here under legislative authority delegated by Congress, McCarran declared, Congress thereafter will continuously be under pressure from dissatisfied groups desiring changes.

Because of the "peculiar nature" of the District, McCarran said, any kind of government established here might be subjected to "change after change in legislation growing out of controversies between Congress and the local authorities."

Chance to Right "Great Wrong"

Among witnesses before the subcommittee there was no disagreement, at least, on the general proposition of national representation, and McCarran, in announcing a second session at 2 p. m. today in the District Committee room in the Capitol, declared:

"This committee sits open-mindedly. Let no one think we are here to hear only one side. If there are any who oppose this resolution, they shall be heard."

Senator Capper told Senators Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and

Miss Chenoweth in Race With Five Others for Vice President General

(Program and Other D. A. R. News On Page 6.)

By Lucia Giddens.

As electioneering mounted in the race for vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Miss Lillian Chenoweth, of Washington, D. C., yesterday drew first place on the ballot. Polls will open today.

Miss Chenoweth and five other candidates are running for the four posts of vice president general at large, in the only contest to develop in this election year. Mrs. William H. Pouch, of New York City, candidate for president general, and her slate of 13 other officers were nominated at last night's session, as were the six candidates for vice president general.

Nominations followed a lengthy series of reports from D. A. R. regents in the 48 States, the District of Columbia and in foreign countries, on work done in the past year.

Mrs. George Duffy, of New York, made the nominating speech last night for Mrs. Pouch. The following gave nominating addresses for the other candidates on her slate: Mrs. Joseph G. Forney, Pennsylvania, first vice president general, nominated by Mrs. Harper D. Sheppard, Pennsylvania; Mrs. John Whittier Howe Hodge, California, second vice president general, by Mrs. Perry Wallace MacDonald, of California.

Mrs. Floyd William Bennison, Minnesota, third vice president general, by Mrs. Nellie Sloan, of Minnesota; Mrs. William Henry Belk, of North Carolina, chaplain general, by Mrs. Eugene Norfleet Davis, of North Carolina; Mrs. William H. Schlosser, of Indiana, recording secretary general, by Mrs. Lafayette LeVan Porter, of Indiana; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, of Colorado, corresponding secretary general, by Mrs. Carbon Gillaspie, of Colorado.

Chicago Teaches the Mafia

Slain Editor Revealed Fascist Secrets, Says Dies Investigator

By the United Press

Chicago, April 16.—A few hours before John Arena, anti-Fascist editor of La Tribune, was slain in the old Chicago way by what police called "imported Mafia gangsters," he furnished a Dies Committee investigator with information about the activities of Ovra, Italian Fascist secret police, in American defense industries.

This was revealed today by the investigator, who said he spent two hours with Arena yesterday. The editor, who had been warned to "lay off" editorials attacking Fascism, was shot by two gunmen late last night as he left a North Side movie theater with Eleanor Herrmeyer, 17, a high school student.

Arena's wife, a pretty blonde, told investigators her husband was a patron of the arts and interested in the girl's singing voice.

At today's police inquest Miss Herrmeyer disclosed she had been in Arena's office a month ago when he received a long-distance telephone call from New York warning him to cease his anti-Fascist attacks.

She said Arena replied over the telephone:

"Maybe I'd better get a bullet-proof vest."

He told the girl the call was from the Italian consulate in New York, she said.

There were, however, conflicting

Greeks Admit German Gains May Outflank Mount Olympus

By the Associated Press

Athens (Thursday), April 17. Two German columns smashing through the heart of the central Greek-British front threatened today to outflank the strong Allied entrenchments thrown up on the slopes of famed Mount Olympus on the eastern coast.

The Greek high command communique disclosed that one column entered the upper valley of the Aliakmon River in the region of Grevena, 60 miles south of the Yugoslav frontier in a drive toward Kalabaka, which is the entrance to the Plains of Thessaly.

The other column plunging southward from the Kozane plateau to the east also crossed the Aliakmon River. This drive was toward the western slopes of Mount Olympus, which forms the eastern anchor of the Allied defense line. Obviously this eastern column intended to skirt Mount Olympus and encircle its fiercely fighting defenders.

Kalabaka is another 30 miles south from Grevena.

Italians Take Gerge

Kalabaka is the northern railhead of a line running to Trikkala and connecting with Larisa, Athens and the main Greek rail network.

Farther east, the Greek command said, the Germans had crossed to the south bank of the Aliakmon from the heights of Kozane. This is about 15 miles south of the town of Kozane. The Aliakmon describes a sharp "V" across the Greek peninsula before emptying into Salonika Bay.

South of the Albanian town of Koritza (Corizza), the Italians were acknowledged to have taken the gorge of Kiasma Marit (apparently on the Devol River).

The Athens radio, which broadcast the communique, said the information "adds nothing new," though it admitted that "it presents all those difficulties which are natural after enforced evacuation

3 Destroyers, 5 Transports Are Annihilated Off North Africa

By the Associated Press

London, April 16.—An entire convoy of three Axis destroyers and five cargo ships bound for Africa with troops, munitions and mechanized equipment was blown up and sunk between Sicily and Tripoli by a British Mediterranean squadron last night at the cost of one British destroyer, the admiralty announced tonight.

Disclosure of the anihilation—so described—followed announcement that the Mediterranean fleet is continually bombarding the German and Italian troops, airport and forts along the Libyan shore in support of the hard-fighting imperial desert armies.

Back on the Job

Thus the British Mediterranean Fleet, with units freed at length from convoy service to Greece, returned to the job of blocking Axis supply lanes to Africa. It is generally believed that German mechanized forces reached Tripoli for their drive into Egypt largely because the British fleet was engaged in protecting the transport of imperial troops from Africa to Greece.

Two of the sunk ships were of about 5,000 tons each, heavily laden with motor transports, the admiralty said; two others of 3,000 tons each, "probably transports," were blown up, and the fifth, a 4,000-ton ammunition ship, blew up with a terrific explosion.

British Destroyer Lost

One Italian destroyer was identified as the 1,628-ton Luca Tarigo, with a normal complement of 185 officers and men. The other two were said to be smaller but were not mentioned by name.

Whether the eight vessels were destroyed by gunfire or torpedoes was not specified.

The admiralty said that "during this successful operation" the British destroyer Mohawk, 1,870 tons, was hit by torpedoes and sank, but that the majority of the crew (normally 190 men) had been rescued.

Nazis Carry Out Threat to Repay Raid on Berlin 'Hundredfold'

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), April 17. Great tongues of flame and smoke coiled over this capital at dawn today and great sprawling areas of blackened masonry entombed, uncounted victims of the German air force's most savage attack of the war.

This was the worst ever, veterans said. The ancient capital was a stricken witness to what Berlin had promised—that the R. A. F. attack on the Nazi capital April 9 would be repaid a "hundredfold."

Wave upon wave of German bombers, some zooming low over the city, dropped tons of heavy explosive and fire bombs to surpass the great December 29 fire raid which gutted so much of London.

Streets Littered with Debris

A choking smoke pall overhung the city, and London never really had a protecting darkness from the moment the first Nazi avalanche of fire and explosive hit the city.

The wailing sirens of ambulances carrying their broken loads to the hospitals and the hoarse shouts of firemen and rescuers continued on into the daylight long after the all clear sounded about 5:30 a. m.

Thousands who sleeplessly huddled beneath the roar of bombs and the barking antiaircraft barrage throughout the night saw a grim spectacle upon entering the streets today.

Great gashes ripped the capital. Brick, timber and glass littered the streets. Firemen battled more flames as fast as they reduced others to smouldering pillars of smoke.

Only two German planes were shot down during all this, preliminary authoritative reports said. One was destroyed by antiaircraft fire, another by British night fighters.

Areas Roped Off

Apparently London received the full impact of the German raid. There were no other bombings reported at this early hour.

Many areas were roped off to protect civilians from the havoc of delayed action bombs.

(A slight interruption of communications between the Associated Press London and New York offices indicated that a time bomb forced the evacuation of the London office.)

Only two or three-minute intervals at times marked the relentless attack.

Report of Convoys Untrue, Knox Says

"There is not a syllable of truth" in published reports that United States naval and Coast Guard vessels are escorting munitions-bearing British merchantmen from Atlantic ports to rendezvous with British warships, Secretary of the Navy Knox told The Post last night.

The reports, published in New York and Washington today, say Coast Guard craft are escorting such British merchantmen from Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York to points in the Atlantic, where they are picked up by the United States neutrality patrol, then escorted to "a rendezvous determined by the British admiralty."

Dies Seeks Seat Vacated by Death Of Sen. Sheppard

Orange, Tex., April 16 (AP).—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, asked Texans today to elect him to the United States Senate to press legislation which would "safeguard our future against enemies that threaten from within and from without."

From his ranch at Jasper he formally announced his candidacy for the seat left vacant by the death of Morris Sheppard. The election will be held before July 9. Four other candidates, including Gerald Mann, Texas attorney general, already had announced.

Dies, emphasizing his desire for a place affording "a larger field in which to fight for these principles of Americanism upon which Texas was founded," announced 16 speaking dates. He will open his campaign at Greenville, where he once lived on a farm, Saturday.

He predicted his candidacy would encounter the "bitter opposition of all the un-American elements," as a result of his work as chairman of the House Committee Investigating un-American Activities.

It is considered likely that several more candidates, possibly including Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, will enter the special election.

Willkie Returns To Law Practice, Heading N. Y. Firm

By the United Press

New York, April 16.—Wendell L. Willkie announced tonight that he is returning to the practice of law and has become senior partner in the 60-year-old firm of Miller, Owen, Otis & Bailey, hereafter to be known as Willkie, Owen, Otis & Bailey.

He will continue to write and speak on political questions of principle but his chief work is to be the practice of law, in which he intends to devote himself to advocacy and trial work. The arrangement by which he entered the firm permits him to be the master of his own time.

His personal offices in the Commodore Hotel, from which he has answered 280,000 pieces of mail since the November election, are to be closed about the end of the month.

Ban on Parking In Downtown Area To Gain an Hour

Washington's impressive array of "do" and "don't" parking signs, frequently confusing to natives and visitors alike, received further revision yesterday under an order by the Commissioners extending the morning-rush ban an extra hour.

Some 2,000 markers on 51 streets must be altered to comply with the Commissioners' edict changing the parking prohibition from 8 to 9:30 a. m. to 7 to 9:30 a. m. The change was made, it was explained, because of the new staggered-hour schedule for Government workers.

After April 27, when the order becomes effective, the 7-9:30 a. m. ban will cover principal streets in both downtown and so-called "fringe" areas.

British Navy's Repairs to Get Priority in U. S.

Many War Vessels Will Visit American Yards, Knox Predicts

By John G. Norris

Secretary Knox disclosed yesterday that British warships coming to American navy yards for repairs will be given priority over all other work there to speed them back to service in the battle of the Atlantic.

"Large numbers" of British naval craft will be coming here for repairs, a situation which is "bound to affect our shipbuilding program," he said.

"It is vital to get these ships back into the fighting line as soon as possible, so we are giving them priority over everything else," Knox said at a press conference. "We hope, however, that it will not delay completion of the two-ocean navy."

The Navy chief disclosed the plan in making another appeal for cooperation in not publishing news of the arrival of British ships here for repairs. Such disclosure, he said, might give the Germans information of the highest military value and cause "a heavy loss of life and ships" should the Nazi U-boat campaign be extended into the western Atlantic.

In the future, he stated, such ships probably will arrive at night and special precaution will be taken that they are not seen entering navy yards.

Urging full cooperation, Knox

British Crack Blitzkrieg in Desert Battles

Lightning Blow at Axis' Rear and Hand-to-Hand Fighting Are Reported

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 16.—A lightning-like British blow at the German-Italian rear in Fort Capuzzo and hand-to-hand fighting just across the border in the Egyptian village of Salum, both backed up by guns of the Royal Navy, were announced by the British today with intimations that these desert outposts might have been wrested from the Axis.

Military circles expressed the view that the Nazi-Fascist blitzkrieg along the narrow strip between the desert and the sea has about spent its force—at least for the moment.

Smultaneously, British headquarters announced that the Duke of Aosta, Italian viceroy of Ethiopia, had sent an envoy by plane to Diredawa. It was not known here whether he sought to negotiate for the surrender of the 40,000 Italian and 36,000 native troops still at large in the East African wilderness or to arange for the withdrawal of Italian women and children.

The admiralty announced the Germans and Italians were being "constantly and successfully" bombarded from the sea, particularly west of Salum, where the road is exposed atop the palisades.

A curio of war was the announced destruction by naval cannon of at least five Axis planes parked at El Gazala airport, west of Tobruk.

Persuasion Efforts Bog Down

Eire Masses Army Near Ulster, Fearing Attempt to Seize Bases

By George Bookman

Ireland has strong troop concentrations along the Ulster frontier in fear of a possible British seizure of base sites in Eire, it was learned here last night coincident with reports from officials that joint Anglo-American attempts to secure the bases by persuasion have reached a stalemate.

Secretary of State Hull told his press conferenc yesterday that he had not raised the question of bases in talks with Frank Aiken, defense minister of Eire, who has been conferring here in efforts to purchase arms, ships and other supplies in the United States.

Other quarters disclosed that the United States has not exerted any pressure on the Dublin government to induce them to turn over bases to Great Britain, but on the other hand, Irish spokesmen have been given a full opportunity to explain to American officials their opposition to granting bases to Britain.

The Irish troop movements, strengthening guards on the frontier with British-ruled Northern Ireland, occurred as pressure from London increased to persuade Ireland to grant British base rights at Berehaven and Cobh, both in County Cork, and at Lough Swilly, in northern Donegal County.

Officials revealed that a large share of Ireland's 70,000 regulars are manning the northern frontier.

Serbs Yielding By Thousands, Berlin Reports

By C. Brooks Peters.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, April 16.—It is indicated in Berlin tonight that the first major battle in the Balkan campaign is now in full progress in the mountainous Greek theater of war somewhere along a front which may run from the Aliakmon River through Servia as far west as Konitza.

The extent of the disintegration of the Yugoslav forces was indicated by two special reports issued late tonight. The first declared that the second Serbian army, with headquarters in Sarajevo, had capitulated. The second revealed that the German forces in the Sarajevo-Mostar sector had, in addition, routed several enemy divisions and thereby captured four generals, numerous officers, 24,000 men and large quantities of war material.

German motorized units are reported to have occupied Sarajevo. Thousands of Serbs are laying down arms, the German high command declares, and the number of prisoners and the amount of booty and war material are growing every hour.

Bombers Harry Retreating Allies

Beyond declaring that German dive-bomber formations inflicted "heavy losses" on the British and Greeks retreating south of Servia, the general headquarters makes no further endeavor to delineate geographically the present battle area.

Three British planes are said by the German high command to have been shot down and 17 enemy planes destroyed on the ground by raids on air fields at Larissa and Kurupawaun. Yesterday and last night, the D. N. B. adds, the German air force continued its attacks on enemy fortifications and railroad appointments in the Greek sector.

This evening the official news agency reported that somewhere in Greece German troops had broken through the first line of British fortified mountain positions after fierce fighting, some of which, it appears, was hand-to-hand combat. As a result, German infantry, without the support of tanks or airplanes and under cover of artillery, is said to have come into possession of an important mountain pass.

Withdrawal Charges Dropped

D. N. B. asserts that several hundred prisoners were taken in this engagement, including New Zealanders and English Midlanders, as well as a large amount of equipment, munitions and supplies.

The German high command makes no mention of the attempted retreat of British forces from Greece which was alleged yesterday by all sections of the German press and in semiofficial utterances. Today's army communique declares merely that nine additional large ships were badly damaged by attacks of the German air force on the harbor of Piraeus. D. N. B. estimates the total tonnage of ships damaged as between 60,000 and 70,000 tons.

The press and semiofficial sources of information, however, declared that the British changed their plans for the evacuation of the Greek theater, probably for two reasons: First, because of the military fact of a rapid and furious advance of the German forces which made it impossible for them to continue their retreat and necessitated their fighting on the spot; second, because of the moral reaction in the world for the "planned and already begun retreat," the continuation of which would have had a devastating effect upon British prestige in the world.

Claim Many Prisoners

The official news agency reports that a considerable number of prisoners has been captured in Greece, and large quantities of war material taken. The Greeks, considerable portions of whose army are asserted to be "in dissolution," left large quantities of war material behind in their retreat.

The German air force continued its attacks on railroad lines and military objectives in southern Hercegovina, the German communique declares, and bombed a naval base in the Adriatic. Off the Dalmatian coast dive bombers are reported to have hit directly a larged armed transport which listed and was beached. Another large merchantman, the official communique declares, was badly damaged off the Island of Brazza.

In the German view, what remains to be done in Yugoslavia consists merely of clean-up operations. Resistance in that theater is occasional, it is said here, and the large remaining portion of the Yugoslav army is encircled in the district between Sarajevo and the Mostar River.

There may still "theoretically" be a single Yugoslav military command, authoritative quarters declared here today. But they indicated that the nature of the present status of military activities in Yugoslavia argues against it.

Roosevelt Invokes Neutrality Act Against Hungary

President Roosevelt yesterday formally recognized that a state of war exists between Hungary and Yugoslavia and invoked the Neutrality Act in the conflict.

The President used the opportunity to take a slap at Nazi-dominated Hungary by observing in the proclamation:

"Hungary having, without justification, attacked Yugoslavia, a state of war exists between Hungary and Yugoslavia."

The proclamation forbids sale of Hungarian securities here, prohibits sales of war equipment to Hungary on credit, bars Hungarian ports to United States vessels and invokes other restrictions of the neutrality law.

said that refusal of a few papers to comply with such voluntary censorship might bring about "the thing everyone wants to avoid, compulsory censorship."

Knox declined to comment about reports that a censorship of cables existed or talk about what could be done to prevent German agents learning of the arrival of the ships and cabling it home.

The Navy Secretary made public a report submitted by Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, which disclosed that 845 combat and auxiliary ships are under construction today, compared with but 138 on January 1, 1940.

During this period, 1 aircraft carrier, 22 destroyers, 8 submarines and 8 auxiliary ships have been completed, while the keels of 59 ships have been laid during the last 15 months. The number of men employed in shipyards has increased from 74,385 to 142,999 during the period and $387,075,163 has been provided by the Government for increasing shipbuilding facilities.

Knox said that he planned to renew his proposal for the establishment of a civil police force to guard Navy yards, with some of the objections which led to its rejection by Congress removed. He said he was "much concerned" about the security of the yards, and that if any sabotage occurs the responsibility will be that of Congress, not the Navy.

Danes Formally Dismiss Minister In Greenland Deal

Copenhagen, Denmark (via Berlin), April 16 (AP).—Denmark's Minister to Washington, Henrik de Kaufmann, was formally dismissed from the foreign service today on the grounds of "misusing the King's name," the foreign office announced.

(De Kaufmann, who concluded an agrement for United States protection of Greenland, is still recognized by the United States State Department, although the German-dominated Danish government declared he was without authority to make the Greenland deal.)

The foreign office statement said he "increased the difficulties of his government, grossly betrayed the state authorities and concluded an agreement which was against the country's security and interest."

Libyan Blitzkrieg Spent, British Say

The R. A. F. said it destroyed four German planes at Fort Capuzzo and another at Derna.

A British ministry of information announcement, first made public in London, said "in Libya our forces have successfully attacked the rear of the enemy position in the Capuzzo area, where enemy vehicles were shelled and set on fire."

Military sources here, however, said the much-shattered Italian fort facing the Egyptian frontier had changed hands time after time before the British grabbed it. (It was not made clear who holds it at the moment.

(A German high command statement, apparently referring to the same action, said a thrust at Salum by British armored vehicles supported by warships was repulsed. This implied German occupation of Salum.)

Prisoners Taken by British

A British communique said vigorous patrol action cost the Germans and Italians losses in men and vehicles and resulted in capture of some prisoners at Salum.

British military circles remarked that the German advance elements has been at the Libyan-Egyptian border for three or four days without showing signs of attempting to progress farther east.

Also supporting the British view that the desert blitzkrieg has eased off, they said there had been no new attack on Tobruk, 50 miles inside Libya, where a British garrison still stands as a threat to the German - Italian communication lines.

(An Italian announcement spoke of the "investment" of Tobruk, but acknowledged the British were putting up a fierce fight with the support of warships close inshore.)

In Ethiopia, the British officially told of steady progress north and south toward Dessie, around which 10,000 Italians and 12,000 of the Italian's native troops are said unofficially to be concentrating.

Italians in Death Trap

The other Italian forces were placed in the Gondar and Jimma areas, southwest and northwest of Addis Ababa. In the last few days, the British announced, they have captured 40 officers, 200 Italians and 1,600 Italian colonial troops.

The British said the Italians more than ever were forced to keep to the main roads, because to stray into the bush meant almost certain death from snipers.

200 to 300 Nazi Raiders Batter Belfast 4 Hours

By the Associated Press

Belfast, Northern Ireland, April 16.—Between 200 and 300 German bombers blasted a path of havoc across North Ireland last night in a raid described as intense as any suffered by British Midland ports.

Hundreds of homes in the working class area of this city of over 400,000 population were destroyed and considerable loss of life here and in surrounding smaller towns was reported.

Rescue workers digging into the wreckage of bomb shelters, homes, two churches, a moving picture theater and library here indicated casualties were heavy.

During the four-hour raid hundreds of incendiary and explosive bombs were dropped, and physicians and nurses removed patients from a hospital wing and nurses' home struck by bombs. Injured patients were treated as more missiles fell about them.

The sweep of the raiders was likened to that of a tornado. In outlying districts, not even isolated farms escaped and in one large area of Belfast, a shipbuilding and manufacturing center, not a single window remained unbroken.

Many persons were killed when a bomb struck a shelter.

Numerous fires sprung up, but they were reported curbed by scores of firemen, with the help of apparatus sent from Dublin, capital of neighboring Eire.

Commenting on the morale of Belfast after the attack, a communique said:

"The recruiting officers are besieged this morning."

The British said the raids were indiscriminate, business, residential and shopping districts suffering alike.

Observers at one post counted no less than 75 to 100 bomb bursts in their single area.

[The German radio, in a broadcast heard in New York by C. B. S. quoted pilots saying on return to their bases that the raid had "excellent results." Great fires were said to be raging in the Thames dockside.]

The raiders dived low to loose their bombs and scurried off, followed by others in procession that kept coming over into the early morning hours.

It was the first big assault on London since the British made their heaviest raid on Berlin April 9.

Some observers compared this new destruction with that of last December 29 when incendiaries rained fire and incredible damage on the ancient "City of London," the financial district.

Explosives were the main fare during the night, however, with fires incidental to the attack.

For the first time in months hotel lobbies were crowded with guests in night dress, unable to sleep in the din of battle.

At one point four persons were believed killed by a hit on a shelter, and rescue squads worked with a crane to lift slabs of concrete off others trapped.

Apparently London bore the full fury of the German raiders, for the British Press Association said there were no reports of bombings elsewhere in England.

One stick of heaviest bombs burst in a line and a witness said buildings collapsed.

Thousands of defense workers were called out in some districts for the first time in a month.

Hundreds in a subway shelter were shaken when a bomb falling nearby interrupted train service and hurled persons downstairs in the station.

In another area a first-aid post was hit and a number of persons were buried in the debris.

The night was clear and starlit, and the British themselves took advantage of it to send strong raiding squadrons against Boulogne and Cap Gris-Nez on the French coast, aiming at big gun emplacements from which the Dover area was shelled again Wednesday.

Watchers at Channel ports reported large fires in the Calais area and thunderous explosions from the direction of Boulogne which shook buildings on the English coast.

Shells dropped in the Dover area, first at intervals of two minutes, and then spasmodically, but the British said they did little damage, and a shell-fire alarm was not sounded.

The air and home security ministries, meanwhile, revised upward to eight their total of German planes shot down in Britain Tuesday night, crediting six of these to night fighters.

On the offensive side, the British said, an R. A. F. plane bombed a 4,000-ton freighter off the German island of Borkum.

"The whole center of the ship appeared to fall to pieces," said the air ministry.

It added that barracks on the shore were attacked from such low levels that one pilot had to climb quickly to avoid the chimneys.

Off the northwest coast of France, three "heavily laden enemy coastal vessels" were hit Tuesday, the Air Ministry related, and two were left in a sinking condition.

Italians Claim Greeks Fleeing All Along Front in Albania

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 16.—Dispatches from Albania tonight reported the Greek army in retreat before Italian forces all along the front which it had held for months.

The Greeks were offering stubborn resistance, however, reluctantly giving way before what La Tribuna described as a "tide of troops and arms spreading toward the south on roads leading to the Greek border."

With the elimination of Yugoslav divisions to the north, the Greek right flank collapsed when Koritza fell, enabling the Italians to occupy Erseke, to the south, the high command announced.

The Italian Ninth and Eleventh Armies were giving the Greeks no rest, La Tribuna's correspondent reported. Hundreds of thousands of men and thousands of field guns hammered away at the shifting Greek lines.

Fighting in Snow

"They are fighting at high altitudes where there still is snow, in the narrow gorges of swollen rivers and on the highways, day and night," the correspondent said.

The Italian offensive was described as developing "decisively and simultaneously in several directions, overcoming enemy strongholds and opening gaps for motorized forces and infantry to follow on the heels of retreating Greek columns."

From the air Italian fliers harassed the troops and blew up bridges in the path of the withdrawal, it was said.

Whole detachments of the Greek rear guard apparently had been stationed along the roads to protect the retreat and salvage war material. This rear guard resistance was concentrated on summits in broken terrain, from which they blocked deep valleys crossed only by twisting, muddy mule paths.

Naval Base Captured

The parallel mountain chains of Trebischini and Schindeli, above Tepeleni, were said to have fallen into Italian hands after hard fighting. Mali Spadaririt, first mountain of the Mali chain which descends to Klisura, was encircled.

Split, Yugoslavia's main naval base on the Adriatic coast southeast of Zara, was reported by the high command to have been captured after an advance of about 240 miles from the Italian Yugoslav frontier.

Yugoslavia's Dalmatian Islands were reported to have been further occupied, and airports at Podgorica, Ioannina, Paramithia and the Greek Island of Corfu attacked by bombers from a low altitude. Ten grounded planes were said to have been set afire and four others shot down.

in keeping with the government's pledge to her people to resist "any attack."

Great Britain was said to have 100,000 troops in northern Ireland.

Ireland can muster, in time of war, a total of 250,000 trained volunteers, it was said. This figure includes the Home Security Force, volunteers who train every evening and weekends.

An army of this size for tiny Eire is equivalent in proportion to population to an army of 8,000,000 in the United States, officials pointed out.

In view of these developments, officials were not hopeful that Ireland would consent to allowing Great Britain to use the three base sites.

Presence of the Irish troops on the Ulster border has been used by Dublin in attempts to secure from the British government a pledge that Britain would not seize the bases, it was said. Irish officials were said to have told London that the troops could be sent to other points, to resist a different type of invasion, if the British would give the requested assurances.

At present Britain is using, for protection of its Atlantic commerce, a base at Lough Foyle, 20 miles from Lough Swilly. The latter site, British experts say, is much more desirable as a jump-off point for antisubmarine vessels and patrol planes.

The new developments, according to officials, will not lighten the task of Irish Defense Minister Aiken, who recently handed in a list of military supplies and ships that Ireland would like to have.

No assurances have yet been given the Irish of how much of the list they may buy here, if any.

It is understood that the Irish seek chiefly antiaircraft and antitank equipment and cargo vessels.

Queen Marie Says Yugoslavs Will 'Fight to the Last'

London, April 16 (AP).—Queen Mother Marie of Yugoslavia said in an interview today that if the women and children of Britain can stand the ordeal of bombing assaults, "so can the women and children of my country."

The Queen said illness alone prevented her from joining her son, 17-year-old King Peter II, in his fight against Nazi invaders. She is 41.

Queen Marie received newsmen in a pastoral retreat 75 miles from London, where she is living with two younger sons, Tomislaw, 13, and Andre, 11.

"I am convinced my people will fight to the very last," she said. "It will be a hard fight, but it was a hard fight in the last war, too. Yugoslavs love liberty and they will do everything to preserve their honor."

and transfer of defensive lines under fire."

Previously, the British declared that heavy fighting was in progress in several sectors of the defense line they and the Greeks threw across the Greek peninsula for a decisive stand against the mechanized hosts of the Nazi invaders.

The Greek military spokesman mentioned a score of towns bombed and machine-gunned by German planes clear across the Greek peninsula, but said damage was small. He declared the Greeks now had taken up new positions, as ordered after the German penetration of western Macedonia.

The Nazi action was far-spread, British forces having been engaged during the day along the whole of the front.

German sources described the main new Allied front as running from Larisa on the east, roughly west to Ioannina.

(An official Athens broadcast heard Wednesday night in London stated that in western Macedonia the engagement was "in full progress." The Germans, it was added, had thrown forward "very considerable forces,' 'supported by aircraft, and had suffered serious losses.

(British and Greek forces repulsed the Germans "everywhere" Tuesday, it was said, and "the Germans nowhere were able to break through our main line.")

The main German drive still was headed down the central section of the Grecian peninsula. A Nazi column to the east fought Allied forces in the region of Mount Olympus. A series of Nazi assaults in that area was declared thrown back.

The war in the air was violent. Allied reports covering operations of yesterday accounted for 16 Axis planes shot down against no reported Allied losses. Too, British fliers were declared to have destroyed a 6,000-ton freighter and a 7,000-ton ammunition vessel in the Italian-held harbor of Valona, in Albania.

German communications were declared cut by British bombers who blew up a bridge across the Vardar River at Veles, a short distance southeast of German-held Skoplje, Yugoslavia.

Motor transports moving southward along the Veles-Prilep road also were successfully bombed, the middle east R. A. F. communique continued. A number of trucks were said to have been destroyed by several fires started in the columns.

Axis planes raided the industrial city of Ioannina, in northwestern Greece near the Albanian border. Some damage was caused.

Antonescu Nips Iron Guard Plot

Bucharest, April 16 (AP).—Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu announced today the discovery of an alleged Iron Guard plot to murder him and members of his cabinet.

Antonescu, it was disclosed, told his cabinet that the murders were planned to take place during church services in the Easter holidays of the Orthodox Church this coming weekend. The premier said that Rumanian authorities were now rounding up the plotters.

St. Lawrence Waterway Plan To Strike Snag

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt's St. Lawrence waterway project, it appeared yesterday may be stalled in Congress by demands for comparable navigation improvements in other areas in the United States.

The two projects most frequently mentioned at the Capital yesterday as counter balances to the St. Lawrence development were the Florida ship canal and the Tombigbee-Tennessee waterway, estimated to cost a total of $226,000,000. Initial costs of the St. Lawrence project are put at $266,000,000.

Also under discussion were a New York harbor improvement program and a Columbia River power and navigation project. Like the two Gulf Coast projects, they would be expected to command support from regions traditionally hostile to the St. Lawrence Waterway.

Cost Put at Billion

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, which might handle St. Lawrence legislation, said the power and navigation projects he had heard suggested in connection with the St. Lawrence project would bring the total cost of the program to $1,000,000,000.

None of the Congressional sponsors of the assorted waterway and power projects was ready to say yesterday that approval of these projects would be required if he were to vote for the St. Lawrence development, but Congressional leaders clearly anticipated such a possibility.

"Don't call it log-rolling," said Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi. "It is a meeting of minds in Congress for a unified program of benefits to all sections of the country."

No Legislation Requested

No St. Lawrence Waterway legislation has yet been asked by the President and Senator George and other Administration leaders said they have not yet had any indication as to how soon or in what form such legislation might be requested.

One well-informed House Democrat said he doubted whether any Congressional action on the St. Lawrence project could be obtained this year.

If a St. Lawrence bill were saddled with other navigation and power projects appealing to all sections of the country the cost of the program would run so high, several Congressmen suggested yesterday, that "the whole thing would be beaten."

Congress Asked To Revise Law On U. S. Witnesses

The Commissioners yesterday sent to Congress a proposed bill which would permit employes of the Federal and District governments to testify in court in cases involving one or the other without loss of pay or annual leave.

Prior to 1924, both District and Federal Government workers were considered on "official business" while attending court cases of this type. But in that year, it was explained, a ruling by the Comptroller General held that witnesses for the Government in cases prosecuted by the District Corporation Counsel were not engaged in official business and the time spent was to be charged against their annual leave.

"The result," said the Commissioners, "has been that Government employes are reluctant to testify."

In communications to Speaker Rayburn and the Senate District Committee, the Commissioners pointed out that the proposed legislation was suggested by the Police Court judges and urged early consideration.

POINTING IN OUR DIRECTION—The French group of ronde singers and dancers, which proved popular at other festivals will come to Washington for the National Folk Festival, May 1, 2 and 3 at Constitution Hall. Parley Hints At Financial Aid to Canada

Possibility of arranging some financial aid to Canada is believed to have been one subject discussed yesterday by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister MacKenzie King of Canada in a 70-minute White House conference.

The prime minister declined flatly to give any idea of what was under discussion, and no word came from the executive offices. Conjecture on likely trends in the talks between the two old friends, however, covered a wide field.

Canada, eligible for material aid under the lend-lease program, is understood to prefer financial assistance in some form, possibly through a loan or credits or through a stabilization arrangement. Having considerably increased her purchases here since the start of the war, the Dominion is understood to be running short of dollar exchange.

Steps that might be taken to overcome the Neutrality Act's prohibition on financial loans to a belligerent and the possible extension of aid through use of this country's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund were pointed to as entirely logical subjects for such a meeting as the heads of the United States and Canadian governments held yesterday.

It was plain, however, that intensification of this country's aid-to-Britain program, with the Battle of the Atlantic assuming critical proportions, offered the two statesmen a host of matters on which they might well want to confer.

Another technical change in the neutrality law to permit American ships to deliver British-aid materials to Halifax, Nova Scotia, was one of many such suggestions. A considerable lightening of the burden now imposed on the British merchant marine and navy would result, it was pointed out.

President Roosevelt has authority to remove Halifax or other ports from the combat zones in which American shipping is barred, but the Neutrality Act's prohibition of delivering goods to a belligerent also would have to be removed.

The prime minister said he expected to see Mr. Roosevelt again early next week, and that he planned to talk with numerous other officials, including Secretary of State Hull. He spent last night at the Canadian Legation but it was understood he would be out of the Capital for several days. Officially, he was said to be on here on a brief vacation, after stopping at Johns Hopkins University Hospital, in Baltimore, yesterday for a quick physical check-up.

Convoy Ban Action Deferred; Tobey Bill to Be Sidetracked

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday deferred action until April 30 on the Tobey resolution to ban use of American naval vessels for convoy purposes.

A preliminary canvass of Administration sentiment on the committee indicated that the Tobey measure would be permanently sidetracked at that time.

Leadership spokesmen asserted privately that the convoy question was not before Congress and not to their knowledge before the Administration and they saw no field for purely "negative" Senate action.

Senator Tobey (Republican) of New Hampshire, was heard in support of his resolution after which on suggestion of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, the date was fixed for committee consideration.

Only a few committee members were present, as the Senate is in three-day recess. Chairman George said that during the interim before the next meeting the resolution will be referred to the State Department for whatever views it wishes to express.

Tobey commented that it was "evident the committee did not wish to meet the issue today."

Senator Tobey, in a speech over the Columbia Broadcasting system, said last night that the reason the Administration did not order his anticonvoy resolution pigeon-holed was that "the American people began to make themselves heard."

"Let me draw a word picture of what has taken place in Washington on the convoy issue in the past two weeks," said Tobey. "At first the President said that the question of convoys was too absurd to talk about. He implied to the people that there was no thought of convoying.

"Then the chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the House took the floor in the Congress and began to beat the drums for convoys. The Secretary of the Navy, who had previously told the people that he was opposed to convoys, was reported to have changed his mind. When asked by the press if this were true, he said, 'I have no comment.'

"Then the President in a press interview admitted that the convoy plan was under consideration by the Government. Then Representative Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, issued a public release stating that the President's hands could not be tied by the Congress on the issue of convoys, and the Congress should not act on any anticonvoy resolution.

"Then the President eliminated the combat zone he had earlier proclaimed at the mouth of the Red Sea by the Suez Canal. Then the President advised that the law requires the Government to protect American ships which go to the Red Sea. . . .

"The time has come to speak plainly. We stand on the threshold of war. If we cross that threshold, as we will by convoying goods, and become an active participant, we will have been guilty of breaking faith with the people. In the train of that war will come the dead, the maimed, the insane, the saddened homes, the heartaches of husbands and mothers and widows, and the probable loss of democracy on the home front and a depression which will make the one of 1930 look like a summer sunset in comparison."

At the White House, Presidential Press Secretary Stephen Early told reporters the President was "very much amused" at newspaper headlines saying American ships would be protected outside of combat zones.

The President said Tuesday the United States was required by law to protect its merchant vessels wherever they go so long as they do not enter combat zones.

Mediation Board Averts Defense Strike

The National Defense Mediation Board won the opening round of its first attempt to prevent a threatened walkout from materializing, when representatives of a C. I. O. union postponed a strike scheduled for Tuesday night at two Minneapolis plants of the Minneapolis Moline Power Implement Co., and agreed to meet with a board panel on Friday.

The organization, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, advised the board in reply to telegraphic requests for a meeting, that it would postpone the strike until Friday midnight. About 2,100 men are involved in the dispute, which concerns wages and a preferential shop. The company holds extensive defense subcontracts and a small direct order to machine shells.

The board also announced yesterday that a panel of its members, not yet selected, would meet Monday with representatives of 50 machine shop concerns in the San Francisco area and leaders of the local A. F. of L. Machinists Union, on strike since April 7.

The firms involved hold about $23,000,000 of defense orders, and seven of them have "vital" priority ratings from the War Department, officials said. About 1,500 men are directly involved and another 8,000 indirectly. The issues are wages and overtime pay.

The board also received word yesterday that a settlement it proposed April 12 to end the Standard Tool Co. strike, at Cleveland, Ohio, was accepted by the C. I. O. auto workers' union and that men were returning to work. The strike began January 27 and involved 650 workers.

The board last night sent telegrams to both union and management officials in the Cowles Tool Co. dispute at Cleveland, asking them to appear at a hearing here next Monday at 10 a. m.

Hearings to Begin Today on Foreign Ship-Seizure Bill

Clearing way for action next week in the House its Merchant Marine Committee this morning will open hearings on the Administration bill empowering the President to requisition idle foreign merchant ships in American waters.

Hearings originally set on the Oliver bill, authorizing the Maritime Commission to purchase or charter such vessels, will be broadened to cover both measures, Chairman Schuyler Otis Bland said. House Majority Leader McCormack said he expected the legislation to be ready for House action early next week.

At least 36 Danish vessels, as well as idle vessels of other foreign flags, would be put to active American use to relieve the ship shortage under the President's bill.

Marine Guard For U. S. Embassy In London Likely

Creation of a Marine guard at the American Embassy in London is planned, officials said yesterday.

Secretary Knox said at his press conference that if the State Department requests the Navy to furnish a detachment to guard the building, a force of one officer and 35 enlisted men will be sent to Great Britain.

At present only one unarmed doorman is on duty to check the large staff of American military, naval, commercial and shipping experts on the staff of the embassy who daily exchange secrets with visiting British officials.

Edmund M. Toland, Washington attorney who was counsel last year for the Smith Committee to Investigate the National Labor Relations Board, was yesterday appointed counsel for the House Naval Affairs Committee's inquiry into the defense program.

Disclosure of Toland's appointment followed the conclusion of committee hearings on the Vinson bill for compulsory "cooling-off" periods in defense labor disputes and for freezing of the status quo in open and closed shops.

Chairman Vinson, sponsor of the bill, said his committee would meet this morning to consider the proposals, which some observers thought would be reported out to the House this week.

Secretary Knox returned to the witness stand yesterday to testify in favor of mediation legislation; but John Green, president of the C. I. O. Shipbuilders Union, attacked the Vinson bill as "coercive" and "unnecessary."

Three Inquiries Loom

After disposing of the Vinson bill the Naval Affairs Committee will embark on its full-fledged inquiry into the defense program, which will be conducted simultaneously with investigations by the House Military Affairs Committee and the special Truman Committee of the Senate.

Representative Vinson said yesterday that the Naval Affairs group would be divided into subcommittees to inquire into aviation, shipbuilding, public works and ordnance, but that the full committee would consider labor problems.

In testifying yesterday on the Vinson bill, Secretary Knox suggested that new legislation on defense strikes be restricted to bringing the men "around a conference table."

He had asserted Tuesday that he favored the "spirit" of the Vinson bill, but that it needed "pruning up a bit." The bill provides for a mandatory 30-day cooling off period before strikes can be called in naval construction labor disputes, and also provides criminal penalties for the establishment of a closed shop in naval defense industries where none exists at the time of enactment of the bill.

Secretary Knox declared that "the most effective weapon we have is public opinion. I would prefer to rely on public opinion in an hour of danger."

Law or Executive Order

Representative Lyndon Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, asked why legislation was desirable, when the existing Mediation Board had been established by executive order.

"I'd rather be ruled by law than by executive order," Knox replied. "If this or similar legislation accomplishes a cooling-off period, I think it will be a very useful thing."

Green, head of the Independent Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (C. I. O.), told the committee that "labor will be far more concerned about defense if its rights are guaranteed." He listed these tha rights to organize, to strike and to petition the Government.

Green pointed to the voluntary cooperation practiced by the Shipbuilding Stabilization Committee, and added that present employer-employe contracts contain no-strike clauses during the life of the agreement.

Representative Vinson read into the committee record a letter from W. C. Hushing, of the A. F. L., stating that the proposed bill was "absolutely unnecessary" and that the National Mediation Board is functioning "in a truly marvelous fashion."

In questioning both Knox and Green, Representative Johnson suggested an amendment to the Vinson bill to permit a governmental census of executives and to give the Government power to draft "executive brains" into the national service.

$40,000,000 RFC Loan to Help Britain

As a first move by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to aid in liquidation of British industrial holdings in this country, the agency has loaned the Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation $40,000,000, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones announced yesterday.

Of the proceeds, $25,000,000 will be turned over to the Louisville, Ky., tobacco firm's British-owned parent company by retiring debts and buying back certain of its securities. This company, in turn, will transmit the funds to the British government and the latter will use the money for defense purchases here, it was indicated.

The remaining $15,000,000 will be used to liquidate a debt to the Guaranty Trust Co., of New York.

Jones said he believed the loan, which carries 4 per cent interest, could be repaid out of earnings during its 10-year life.

He added:

"The loan is made in line with the policy of the Federal Government to require the liquidation of British-owned American investments for the purpose of providing funds for the purchase of supplies in this country, the net proceeds of the loan being estimated to be what the net realizable sum would be to the British owners if these American investments were sold outright, or the companies liquidated. These American companies, which are important to our own economy, will suffer no disturbance."

Although Jones declared no similar loan is pending, reports from New York said that some Wall Street banking quarters interpreted the act as the precursor of other RFC aid in speeding liquidation of British investments in this country.

Iron and Steel Prices Frozen

he must pay more for what he buys, and so the foundation would have been laid for a dangerous upward spiral of prices in general—which would mean, briefly, boosting the cost of living."

Noting that there has not been time for an accurate measurement of the various factors in the steel industry, Henderson justified his sudden action on the grounds that "estimates and guesses are not enough when the Nation's welfare may be at stake."

Henderson's price order followed by a few hours warnings of impending steel shortages, voiced at Navy Secretary Knox's press conference. Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, explained that the "pinch" in steel is increasing and that he was afraid it would be necessary to curtail commercial uses of steel by a rationing system.

The admiral added, "steel is now becoming as much of a problem as aluminum became some time ago."

(Aluminum was placed under a priorities and rationing system a few weeks ago.)

Robinson said that there is enough structural steel to take care of Navy and Maritime Commission shipbuilding, but the impending stortage might mean restricting nondefense use. The tight situation is not confined to structural steel, he stated, but applies to other varieties, particularly forged steel, where the situation was the most severe.

Asked how this dovetailed with the two-month-old report to the President of Gano Dunn, industrial engineer, which held that existing steel-making and steel-finishing capacity was adequate, the admiral replied that an enormous increase in demand for steel had arisen since Dunn made his findings.

A possibility that the present steel shortage appears in a worse light than the facts justify, however, was indicated by reports of heavy advance buying for inventory purposes by consumers who feared a second-quarter price rise. These reports declared that nonmilitary consumption of steel, at least, might actually decline in the last half of this year.

Senate D. C. Unit To Meet Today

For the second time during his three-month tenure as chairman of the Senate District Committee, Senator Reynolds yesterday called a meeting of the committee for 10:30 a. m. today.

As Reynolds is slated to resign his chairmanship to head the Military Affairs Committee, the meeting in the committee room in the legislation to be considered, it was expected that the committee would attempt to clear its calendar of a number of noncontroversial District bills.

Northern Coal Fight Settled; South Dissents

New York, April 16 (AP).—Labor and management today agreed upon a new two-year labor contract for most of the country's defense-vital soft coal industry, but immediate reopening of the paralyzed mines remained uncertain because Southern coal operators still spurned the accord.

Chief Federal Conciliator John R. Steelman indicated, however, that if the contract did not lead to immediate industry-wide agreement it would result in resumption of a major portion of bituminous production within a week.

Although negotiators withheld details of the contract until an 11 a. m. session tomorrow, it has been common knowledge that the contract would call for a flat $7 a day basic wage for the 330,000 Appalachian miners, raising wages $1 a day in the North and $1.40 in the South, thus eliminating a 40-cent differential which the Southern operators have long enjoyed.

Strike May Continue

It was this elimination that prompted operators from southern West Virginia, eastern Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia to bolt the joint conference last week and establish their own bargaining organization in Washington.

As soon as the contract was announced, U. M. W. A. Chieftain John L. Lewis served notice that the Government should insist that the Southern group adhere to the contract. He then declared that Northern miners would not be inclined to return to the mines if their Southern brothers had to "continue to starve."

Therefore, Lewis continued, the "effective date of its (the contract's) application is uncertain, due to the absence from this conference of the Southern operators."

In Washington, Presidential intervention in an effort to put the 400,000 miners back to work was sought today, while Army ordnance officers reported that steel production was declining because of lack of fuel.

"We can do nothing more in negotiations," Southern operators told Representatives in Congress from the half-dozen Southern coal States.

Steel Operations Curtailed

Rapidly diminishing stocks have forced curtailment of steel mille operations. Hasty surveys by the Ordnance Corps showed that only in the Birmingham, Ala., steel district was a large supply of coal available. In Chicago, Pittsburgh and Cleveland districts blast furnaces have been shut down and closing of others was planned, the reports said.

Just what form any intervention by President Roosevelt might take remained in doubt after about 20 Rrepresentatives and Senators voted to ask his aid in getting the mines back into operation.

"We will ask President Roosevelt to turn the whole matter over to the Defense Mediation Board, appoint an umpire to settle differences, or take any other steps he desires, just so we can get the mines back into production," declared Representative Kee (Democrat), of West Virginia, who presided at the conference of Southern Congressmen.

The request will be submitted to Mr. Roosevelt, he said, by a group of legislators headed by Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina. Kee said efforts would be made to obtain a White House appointment for tomorrow and representatives of the Southern operators' group probably would accompany the Congressional delegation.

Foundry Workers Quit

Buffalo, N. Y., April 16 (AP).—The C. I. O. Steel Workers' organizing committee sponsored a work stoppage at the American Car & Foundry Co. plant today, the second in two weeks, and a union spokesman said production is "almost completely halted."

The plant employs 1,400 on British orders for artillery shells.

Carl W. Meier, S. W. O. C. executive board chairman, said only company consent to a collective bargaining agency election will end the stoppage, begun yesterday by forge department employes.

Chemical Plant Closed

St. Louis, April 16 (AP).—The Monsanto Chemical Co.'s plant at Monsanto, Ill., which supplies chemicals essential to national defense, was shut down today by a strike of the A. F. of L. Chemical Workers Union, which is demanding increased wages and a closed shop.

Some of its products go to the British Purchasing Commission.

The union, recognized by the company as the bargaining agent for production workers, has a membership of 650 of the 900 men employed at the plant.

Firing Causes Strike

Hartford, Conn., April 16 (AP).—Approximately 325 employes of the Hanson-Whitney Machine Co., which a company official said was "a 100 per cent national defense plant," struck today after an employe was discharged.

Leaders Confer Today on National Defense Morale

Summoned to Washington by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, more than 500 community leaders will participate in a national defense morale conference at the Willard Hotel today.

Among speakers tentatively scheduled to address the one-day session are Secretary of War Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Production Administrator Knudsen, Gen. George C. Marshall and Charles P. Taft, assistant coordinator of health, welfare and defense activities.

Arrangements for the hurriedly called conference were made by the United Service Organizations, of which Walter Hoving, of New York, is president.

Registration will begin at 10 a. m. and the program will get under way a half hour later. Morning speakers will be Secretary Stimson and McNutt, the latter also reading to the assembly a special message from President Roosevelt.

As plans stood last night, Secretary Knox, Gen. Marshall and Hoving were to speak at the afternoon session, beginning at 2 p. m.

At 4 o'clock the entire group will leave for an inspection tour of Fort George G. Meade, where they will have dinner and participate in informal regional conferences before adjournment at 8 p. m.

reports on Arena's status as an anti-Fascist. In New York, Giuseppi Lupis, former business associate of Arena in Chicago, described him as pro-Fascist and anti-Semitic.

Wife Cites Jealousies

Mrs. Arena testified "many persons were jealous" of her husband and "one of them threatened to chase him out of Chicago."

Dr. Riccardo Moscati, Italian consul general, refused a police request that he attend the inquest or send representatives. He said Arena's editorial criticisms of the consulate were "very silly" and "not worth reply."

In Washington, the Dies Committee described Arena as one of its principal informants on Italian Fascist activity in Chicago.

Arena told the Dies investigator that he had furnished similar information to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and had received acknowledgment from J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, on February 21, who said his information would be given "appropriate consideration." This was confirmed by William Devereaux, chief of the Chicago FBI office.

In an article published in La Tribuna February 21, Arena described the Italian Vice Consul Giuseppe Dell'Agnol as the "leading force and fuehrer" of Italian Fifth Column activity in Chicago. Dell'Agnol was not available for comment.

Killed After Movie

Arena had been forming an organization called "The Italo-American Unity," with the slogan "America Always," and had written scores of letters to prominent Chicago Italians asking them to become officers.

Miss Herrmeyer, a petite redhead, said Arena took her to dinner and then to a movie last night. Leaving the theater they had just entered Arena's automobile when two men approached.

"Hey, bud," one of them said, "you've got a flat tire."

Arena got out to look and the gunmen opened fire, escaping in an automobile parked nearby. Police believed a third man drove them away.

Public Backs Aid Program, Editors Reveal

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

How do the American people feel about the war in this fateful spring of 1941?

A casual poll of delegates to the nineteenth convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors indicated yesterday that the people, taken as a whole, stand just about where President Roosevelt stood in the 1940 campaign: All aid to Britain "short of war."

The editors, who open a crowded, two-day convention in the Willard Hotel at 10 o'clock this morning, reported a State of mind in some sections that might baffle a foreigner.

Tom Wallace, editor of the Louisville Times and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, described sentiment in his region as follows:

"They all want to stay out of the war, but they are willing to do all the things that are likely to get us into the war."

War consciousness was reported to be strongest on the East and West Coasts and in the South. The Middle West, it was agreed, appeared to be less conscious of the war and its possible effects on the United States than any other section. However there were exceptions to this generalization.

Cleveland Extremely War Conscious

N. R. Howard, editor of the Cleveland News and secretary of the society, said that the Ohio metropolis was extremely war conscious. He pointed out that 67 per cent of Cleveland's population is made up of racial groups whose homelands have been invaded by Hitler. The city, he said, has 78,000 Slovenes, 40,000 Croats, 15,000 Serbs, 85,000 Poles and 80,000 Bohemians.

"They hate Hitler," said Howard, "and they believe he has to be stopped. In no city outside of New York is the feeling so strong in this respect. All three of the Cleveland newspapers—the News, the Plain Dealer and the Press—take the position that it will be impossible for the United States to continue its free American way of life unless Hitler is stopped."

Palmer Hoyt, editor and publisher of the Portland Oregonian, said that the attitude of his part of the West Coast was much like that of the East Coast. The people feel that Britain must win the war. They hope the United States won't have to go in, he said, and yet he felt that a referendum would show a majority in favor of American convoys if convoys were necessary to get supplies to Britain. The recent speech of Prime Minister Churchill on the Battle of the Atlantic, he said, made a deep impression in the Oregon country.

Favor Help Short of War

"Right now they favor every help to Britain short of war," Hoyt said. "At the same time there is a significant fatalism in their attitude. They know that a job to be faced is a job to be done."

Dwight Marvin, editor of the Troy Record and second vice president of the society, reported that in his section the predominant sentiment was for all-out aid to Britain.

"But there is a terrific antiwar sentiment," he said. "They don't feel that we ought to go to war to help the British. I don't think they would favor American convoys."

The convention will be opened in the small ballroom of the Willard by the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives. President Wallace will address the society, and then the various officers and committee chairmen will make their reports.

This will be followed by a discussion on "The Newspaper and the Community." Mayor James Garfield Stewart, of Cincinnati, will talk on "What a Good City Government Deserves From the Papers." Ralph Coghlan, editor of the editorial page of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, will discuss "The St. Louis Antismoke Campaign." Monte Curtis, city editor of the Buffalo Evening News, will talk on "Clean-up in Buffalo." John W. Larue, managing editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer, will talk on "Crusading With Pictures." Nelson Poynter, editor of the St. Petersburg Times, on "Bond Issues vs. Sex Appeal," and Oxie Reichler, editor of the Yonkers Herald Statesman, on "How a Newspaper Can Teach Good Government."

Press Club to Entertain

At a luncheon at 12:30 p. m. on the first floor of the Willard, Dr. Vergil Reed, director of the Census, will talk on 'What the 1940 Census Means to the Newspaper."

A discussion on "The Editorial Influence Today," with some reference to the 1940 campaigns, will start at 2 p. m. in the small ballroom. Prof. Peter H. Odegard, of Amherst College, author of "The American Public Mind," will talk on "Editors—Educators or Agitators?"

This will be followed by a round-table discussion in which the following, besides Prof. Odegard, will take part: Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade; Stephen C. Noland, editor of the Indianapolis News; Hamilton Owens, manager of the Baltimore Evening Sun; Jonathan Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer.

At 4 p. m. the editors—badge-wearing members only—will hold an off-the-record conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. At 8:30 p. m. they will be guests of the National Press Club at a smoker and entertainment.

Favorable Action Forecast On District Expense Measure

The House District Committee will favorably report the Overton formula for determining the portion of District expenses to be borne by the Federal Government, Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, predicted last night.

Hunter, House sponsor of the measure, added his belief that the formula, as modified at the suggestion of President Roosevelt, stood a reasonably good chance to be adopted.

His confidence in ultimate success for the plan that would give the city government approximately $3,000,000 additional Federal funds was based, he said, on President Roosevelt's promise of active support through Administration leaders in Congress.

Hunter said Chairman Randolph of the District Committee would call that body together at a night session next Tuesday or Wednesday for consideration of the formula. It had been previously announced that Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, author of the formula, would meet with the committee.

The formula would make the Federal payment bear the same ratio to the District budget as United States owned land bears to the area of the city. President Roosevelt approved the measure with the understanding that funds thus raised would be used primarily for Capital improvements in the District.

Hunter yesterday conferred with District officials over the draft of an amendment designed to bring the formula bill, as it passed the Senate, in line with the President's wishes.

"It's a dandy amendment," he said, "and I think Congress and residents of the District will be satisfied. There's no question in my mind but what we have enough votes to get the bill out of committee."

Big Board's Chief And Page Boy Buddies in Arms

New York, April 16 (AP).—Two former employes of the New York Stock Exchange joined the Army today—William McChesney Martin, jr., 34, who resigned as exchange president when the Army called, and William Metrinko, 23, who quit his job as exchange page boy when his number came up.

Martin's salary was $48,000 a year, Metrinko's was $16 a week, but both started work for Uncle Sam at $21 a month.

The only comment from Metrinko when he heard Martin was in the same induction class was: "Gee." After a little mediation, he opined that there was "no future in Wall Street."

About the same time, Martin was saying to newsmen that "the future of Wall Street is as bright as any other place in the country," and adding that "if the country is going to survive, the stock exchange will, too."

Von Krog, of Iowa.

In the drawing for places on the ballot in the race for vice president general at large, the line-up, after Miss Chenoweth in first place, was: Mrs. Elly Ruff Barnes, Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. William Wesley Brothers, Pocatello, Idaho; Mrs. James F. Donahue, Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Thomas Clair Maguire, Plant City, Fla.

Nominating speeches for the candidates for vice president general were made as follows: Miss Chenoweth, by Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Brothers by Mrs Henry Ashcroft, of Idaho; Mrs. Sinclair by Mrs. Charles C. Smoot, of Virginia; Mrs. Barnes by Mrs. A. S. Mitchell, of Alabama; Mrs. Donahue by Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, of Ohio; Mrs. Maguire by Mrs. Robert S. Abernathy, of Florida.

Seconding Speeches Made

Mrs. Frank Madison Dick, of Maryland, candidate for honorary vice president general, was nominated by Mrs. George H. Stapp, of Maryland. Seconding speeches were also made for all the candidates.

At the close of the nominations, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., who is just closing her term as president general, was nominated for honorary president General. The nomination was made by Mrs. Val Taylor, ranking vice president general of Uniontown, Ala., and seconded by Mrs. George Maynard Minor, of Litchfield, Conn., the senior living honorary president general. Mrs. Robert's name will appear on tomorrow's ballot. This became necessary because of a change in the by-laws made at the last Congress, which provides for the election of honorary presidents general by balloting instead of by acclamation.

Among the State regents' reports of work in the past year, the account from Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, of the District of Columbia, listed five new scholarships in approved schools; the completion of a $500 gift for a room in the new high school at Tamassee in South Carolina, the reaching of the $5,000 goal for the D. A. R. Student Loan Fund, and other achievements.

The Virginia report from Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair pointed out the completion of the ballroom of Gadsby's Tavern at a cost of $5,000 as the major golden jubilee project in that St te.

"The Virginia organization has never been in better condition. I leave it with all obligations met and a substantial sum in its treasury," Mrs. Sinclair's report stated, listing 82 chapters with a membership of 4,000, add nine junior groups.

The Maryland report from Mrs. Stapp stated that 30 of its 32 chapters had jubilee projects. One of the gifts mentioned in her report was a mobile kitchen canteen unit sent to Britain by a member through Dorset Chapter.

Opposition to legislation which would bring Federal control over education was registered by the D. A. R. fiftieth Continential Congress in a resolution adopted unanimously yesterday at the business session at Constitution Hall.

Although no bills were named, the resolution stated that "bills before the Congress of the United States through taxation and subsidy would conrtol education in the several States and the trend of education in the United States."

Another resolution, unanimously adopted, added to the D. A. R. program of education "the study of Latin-American peoples and of materials that might be sent to them to contribute toward a better knowledge of the United States," pointing out that "the unity and defense of the Western Hemisphere depend upon understanding and cooperation between the peoples of the 21 American republics."

The first mobile blood transfusion unit, to be sent into service by the American Red Cross, was presented through a check for $1,500 by the National Society of the D. A. R., as a surprise feature on yesterday's program. The motor vehicle, equipped with refrigerating and other devices, will be able to take care of blood from voluntary donors, which will be processed into blood plasma for emergency use for service men of the United States.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the D. A. R., made the presentation to Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary, American Red Cross, at the conclusion of her address on "The Red Cross in War Relief."

"Rest assured the American Red Cross is ready for action, should the time come," Miss Boardman said.

Miss Boardman in her address pointed out that the Red Cross is placing approximately 200 liaison officers in the cantonments to act as mediums between the men, their families and the people of the United States. "It is providing for an annual expenditure of $1,000,000 in this preparedness service," she said.

For recreation of men in the camps, the Red Cross is providing $1,000,000 for sports supplies, for which the Army had no approriation, she said.

"Today, besides thousands of tons of suplies on the way to Great Britain, Finland, France and Spain, relief supplies, including those required for the sick and wounded, worth over $2,000,000, are on their way to Greece," Miss Boardman said. "As soon as possible, an equally important shipment, with $1,000,000, will be made to Yugaslavia."

E. W. Loveridge, assistant chief, U. S. Forest Service, speaking at yesterday's session on "Forestry in the Nation's Defense," discussed the recommendation for Government regulation of timber cutting on commercial forest lands, from the Joint Committee on Forestry which recently made a report to Congress.

He said this proposal, designed to stop destructive forest exploitation, would have to be appreciated "by many public-spirited individuals and organizations before it will become the law of the land."

The D. A. R. has contributed approximately $163,793 to schools last year and $340,856 in the last three years, Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, chairman of approved schools, said in her report to the Congress yesterday.

Mrs. Inez Henry, executive secretary of the Berry Schools in Georgia, told of the opportunities offered there for boys and girls to work and learn. She herself raised a crippled calf on her father's farm in south Georgia, sold it for fare to the Berry School near Rome, Ga., arriving with 47 cents left—the only money she had from nome during her school days there.

Groups of pupils from Tamassee D A. R. School in South Carolina and from Kate Duncan Smith D. A R. School in Alabama sang and played guitars, after brief addresses by the heads of those two schools, Ralph H. Cain and Marvin O. Baxter, respectively.

Charles T. Morgan, director of admissions, Berea College, Kentucky, Miss Mary Fitzgerald, student at American International College, Massachusetts, and W. T. Francis, executive secretary, Carr Creek Community Center, Kentucky, also appeared on the school program yesterday afternoon, preceded by reports on the activities of junior members of the D. A. R.

Two other resolutions were adopted unanimously yesterday. The D. A. R. voted to promote public community programs on Citizenship Recognition Day, the third Sunday inn May, which has been designated nationally for the welcoming of persons reaching 21 years of age and of naturalized citizens into citizenship.

Bar Group Commended

In the other resolution the D. A. R. commended the American Bar Association for its sponsorship and the Congress of the United States for the enactment of the Nationality Act of 1940, defining citizenship.

Among reports by national officers yesterday, Mrs. Bessie Howe Geagley, chairman of the Red Cross committee of the D. A. R., reported that a total of $61,699.27 and 329,792 articles, as well as 748,749 hours in work, had been given to the Red Cross and other war relief agencies.

Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, only member who has attended all of the 50 D. A. R. congresses, gave brief reminiscences at yesterday's session. She presented to Mrs. Robert an antique pie-knife, which she brought from Europe many years ago.

Honorary presidents general, who have served in that office in past years, presented "Milestones" of their administrations in brief talks yesterday. They were Mrs. George Maynard Minor, Mrs. G. L. H. Brosseau, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, Mrs. Russell William Magna and Mrs. William A. Becker. The only other surviving former president general, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, was unable to attend because of illness. A report on her administration was read by Mrs. Brosseau.

Neioma Whitecloud, a Sioux Indian, sang soprano solos, a group of Indian songs at the morning session.

Police Get Goat That Got Goats Of Autoists Galore

Patsy got the goats of a number of office-bound motorists in the 1700 block Bladensburg Road Northeast, yesterday, cavorting like a spring lamb all over the street. But then, she is a goat herself.

She had traffic in a tangle until one driver, unintentionally of course, nudged her with a fender, knocking her into the gutter.

Patsy was only bruised, but the blow was sufficient to allow Motorcycle Policeman E. G. Comingore and several citizens to "apprehend" her. And like any two-legged prisoner, she was led to a patrol box.

Before "the wagon" could arrive, Sergt. W. C. Lewis rode up on a motorcycle with a sidecar. Patsy was loaded into it and taken to the District Pound.

Residents of the neighborhood said Patsy had been running around the section for four days and that she probably fell off a passing truck.

A compassionate reporter yesterday gave her her name.

Army Surveys Camp Sites for Million More

Undersecretary of War Patterson disclosed yesterday that the Army has initiated surveys for 26 new cantonment sites which would house an additional 800,000 to 1,000,000 troops.

He told the Senate defense investigating committee that engineering and architectural firms were being hired to make the survey under a $15,000,000 fund recently voted by Congress. Such preparations now would bring great savings in camp construction should an increase in the Army above the present projected 1,418,000-man force, he stated.

"Precautionary" Survey

War Department officials said the survey might include sites for 32 or more new cantonments to house as many as 1,300,000 additional soldiers. Both they and Undersecretary Patterson emphasized the survey is "precautionary" and said that the War Department has not decided to ask for a further expansion of the Army.

Patterson declared that during the building of the present cantonments engineers surveying the project worked "one jump ahead of the carpenters." When Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, asked him why the Army had not asked Congress for money to make such a survey two years ago, Patterson replied:

"They'd made short shrift of any officer who suggested then that we ever have an Army of 1,400,000 men. Congress would have said it was fantastic."

More Camps to Be Built

The camp site surveys will include investigation of water supplies, sewer and power facilities and the preparation of complete working plans for the cantonments.

Officials said that camps for 25,000 to 30,000 men are contemplated in the future, each to hold one armored and one "triangular" infantry division, rather than the huge contonments built in some sections this year.

British to Bolster Dollar Exchange

The Treasury Department announced last night that $132,000,000 worth of newly mined gold, purchased in South Africa, had arrived at New York.

The gold, it was explained, was bought from the British treasury through the United States' stabilization fund. Proceeds from the sale will be used in replenishing the British dollar exchange in this country.

Hull Suggests Bill to Allow Aliens to Escape the Draft

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration moved yesterday to permit all aliens who have filed intentions to become citizens to withdraw from the selective training program but only at the cost of "forever" forfeiting rights to citizenship.

Secretary of State Hull in a letter to Speaker Sam Rayburn recommended changes in the Selective Service Act to make such alien exemptions possible. He said several diplomatic missions have complained.

A proposed amendment accompanying the letter was referred to the House Military Affairs Committee. Chairman Andrew J. May promised prompt action.

Opposition to more general revision of the Selective Service Act to bring younger men into the training program meanwhile developed in an executive session of the committee.

Favor Longer Test

Chairman May later said that members generally were disposed to wait until the act has been tested longer i.. operation before considering amendments to reduce age limits from 21 to 18.

President Roosevelt, at his Tuesday press conference, said proposals to lower the age limits are being studied and might be ready for committee consideration in May or early June.

During yesterday's closed session of the Military Affairs Committee, Representative Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Sparkman (Democrat), of Alabama, and others are understood to have voiced opposition to the age change.

Faddis later told reporters he was convinced "the average boy of 18 has not reached the proper physical development to make a desirable soldier."

Withholds Judgment

May, who introduced by request the American Legion bill lowering age limits said he is withholding judgment until the plan reaches Congress. Longer operation, he said, may disclose several changes needed in the act. But he thought the committee should proceed at once on the Hull recommendation regarding aliens.

Secretary of State Hull meanwhile wrote Speaker Rayburn that his department has received communications from a number of diplomatic missions complaining that nationals of their countries are being drafted for training and service.

"The department is desirous of honoring the treaty obligations of this Government," he wrote, "and after conferences with the other interested agencies of the Government it has concluded that the appropriate way to solve the problem is by the amendment of the Selective Service Act."

The proposed amendment would provide "that any male alien residing in the United States who has declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States who is registered or who is or who may become eligible to registration under the provisions of this act shall be relieved of liability to training and service thereunder if he makes a declaration prior to becoming a member of the land or naval forces or within a time fixed by the President, if he is already a member of the land or naval forces, in accordance with such regulations as the President may prescribe, withdrawing his intention to become a citizen of the United States which shall be held to cancel his declaration to become a citizen of the United States and to forever bar him from becoming such a citizen."

Keep False Teeth Purified Says Dr. Sherwin

Don't brush your false teeth or dental plates—you can't purify them that way—you can't even clean them properly that way.

Keep up with the times—get today a generous 30-cent bottle of Stera-Kleen—give your plate a bath as directed, and after the first bath your false teeth will start to sparkle with purity and cleanliness—will so glisten with beauty that you'll be proud of them. Your mouth will feel much better—rejuvenated.

Just a little of Stera-Kleen in a half glass of water and all slimy mucin stains and murkiness begin to go—it's amazing—lasts for weeks—30 cents—all drug stores.

29th Division Receives 788 New Vehicles

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 16.—New equipment, ranging from motorcycles to huge trucks, is streaming into the motor parks of the Twenty-ninth Division to overcome what was once a difficult transport problem.

A total of 788 new vehicles has been issued to the division since it went into camp here, Maj. William N. Briscoe, motor maintenance officer, said today, and more are arriving every day. More than a dozen new trucks arrived this afternoon.

In line with the present modernization program, some 2,800 older vehicles which the division now has eventually will be turned in for new ones.

With the job complete, Briscoe said, the division would be entirely motorized and would be able to go anywhere under its own power. For instance, it would be possible to move the entire outfit by road to Ogdensburg, N. Y., scene of the first Army maneuvers last year to which a large part of the division went by train.

176th Infantry to Entertain

The 176th Infantry Regiment from Baltimore will entertain visitors at Fort Meade this weekend as first unit to remain in camp under a new weekly program announced by the Twenty-ninth Division today.

Relatives and friends of members of the regiment have been invited to visit camp Saturday afternoon and Sunday, and division headquarters announced that a regimental review, sports events and other entertainment features are being arranged for their benefit.

One complete regiment will stay in camp each weekend from now on and similar parades and programs will be scheduled for families and friends of members.

During past weekends, 80 per cent of the soldiers of each of the division's ten regiments and special troops have been permitted to take weekend leave, extending from Saturday noon until midnight Sunday night.

Visitors to Eat With Soldiers

This practice will continue in all units except the regiment designated to remain "at home" over the weekend, it was announced.

It also was announced that visitors would be welcome to eat in company mess halls with the men they are visiting. Division officials asked that this be arranged for in advance through the soldiers and their company officers, so that cooks would know how much food to prepare.

One regiment from the Twenty-ninth Division, the 111th Field Artillery, with batteries from Richmond, Fredericksburg, Newport News, Hampton, Portsmouth and Norfolk, Va., reached its full wartime quota of 67 officers and 1,145 enlisted men today.

The regiment, under command of Col. E. Slater Montague, has been receiving selectees all week and is the first unit of the division to reach wartime strength.

Stoneleigh Court Sold; Management Will Be Unchanged

Sale of Stoneleigh Court, large apartment building at the southeast corner of Connecticut Avenue and L Street Northwest, was announced yesterday. The eight-story stone and brick building, one of the earlier large apartment structures of Washington and a landmark in the section, was sold for Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. to Stoneleigh Court, Inc., at an undisclosed consideration, Weaver Bros., Inc., handling the transaction. The purchasing corporation will continue to operate the property as stores and apartment building and Weaver Bros., Inc., will continue to manage it. Mrs. Ruth Parker Dove is resident manager of the building.

Construction of the building was begun in 1902 by James L. Parsons for the estate of John Hay, a former Secretary of State, James G. Hill being the architect. The property is now assessed at $1,152,820.

New Program To Make Men Fit for Draft

A nation-wide program for the "prehabilitation" of Selective Service registrants with remediable physical defects was announced yesterday at national selection headquarters.

The program includes the "education" of candidates in Army physical standards and the cooperation of their physicians as well as public and private health agencies in correction of their ailments before their classification.

At the same time Capital selection headquarters made public the names of 42 men to be sworn in for Army service today. They will be inducted at Richmond and will go through "processing" at Camp Lee, Va., reception center.

Among those to be inducted tomorrow is Ladislaus J. Esunas, founder and secretary general of the Baltic American Society of Washington. The recruit, an assistant auditor at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, was decorated by the Latvian government last December for his efforts in promoting better cultural understanding among Baltic countries.

Machinery for the "prehabilitation" plan, which it is hoped, will reduce the present large percentage —32—of registrants failing local board medical tests is being set up in cooperation with the aid of the American Medical Association.

A central committee would be established in each State to guide the project. It would follow this plan: (1) familiarization of all registrants with Army medical standards; (2) application of candidates to local physicians and dentists when they fall short; (3) cooperation of the latter in their correction. The program also includes treatment by public agencies of persons unable to pay for services of private practitioners.

Those to be inducted are:

Sen. Smith Assails D. C. Draft Board

the routine of my office. He has proven a conscientious and efficient committee clerk," Senator Smith declared.

The 26-year-old registrant had asked for deferment in order to complete his schooling and continue his clerkship which "in this emergency is necessary to the national defense as evidenced by the letter of the Senators of the committee," his father asserted.

He added: "To me it is a disgraceful and inhuman performance on the part of public officials involved that my son, because he is my son, has not been accorded the consideration shown other young men in America. It is unprecedented for a draft board to lend itself to a murderous assault. Of all those asking for deferment, Ellison Smith, jr., alone has been pilloried."

"I did not vote for the Draft Act," Smith continued. "I did not ask for my son's exemption. I did not appear before the draft board."

The board refrained from placing young Smith in Class 2 because a "necessary man," Arnold explained, is one whose work is essential to national health and security and because he is indispensable in that position. In the latter regard, Arnold said, the registrant testified he has a number of assistants, two of them members of his own family.

The Congressional Directory lists E. D. Smith, jr., as assistant clerk; C. Alfred Lawton, his brother-in-law, clerk, and Mrs. Isobel Smith Lawton, his sister, and Charles F. Smith, a brother, as other assistant clerks.

Appeal Agent Block, however, stated last night he felt Smith's deferment claim had "merit" and would assist him in taking the case to the District Appeal Board, should he so desire. Young Smith could not be reached for comment last night.

Funds Approved For Reports Office

The Senate Committee on Expenditures, in the Executive Departments yesterday approved legislation giving the Office of Government Reports permanent footing as a part of the executive offices and authoring annual appropriations of $1,500,000 for the agency.

Senate approval of the bill, which passed the House last month, is expected next week.

The reports agency has been operated since its establishment in 1933 with funds allocated from emergency relief appropriations.

Mrs. Blundon's Will Benefits 5 Hospitals

Beneficiaries under the will of Mrs. Harry C. Blundon, who died February 21 at her home in Silver Spring, Md., include four Washington hospitals, the Montgomery County General Hospital, an orphans' home and several churches, it was revealed yesterday when the instrument was admitted to probate at Rockville.

Mrs. Blundon was the widow of Francis A. Blundon, former Washington real estate dealer.

From proceeds of the sale of the 84-acre family estate on Georgia Avenue Extended, the will directs the following bequests be made:

Children's Hospital, $10,000; Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, $1,000; Homeopathic Hospital, $1,000; Providence Hospital, $1,000; Montgomery County Hospital, $1,000; Home for Incurables, $1,000.

Other institutions benefiting under the will include Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md., $5,000 for a memorial to Mr. Blundon; Central Union Mission, Washington, $1,000; St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, and the German Orphans' Home, Washington, $500 each.

A life interest in the net income from all the purchase money from the estate over $15,000 is left to Mrs. Bessie E. Behrens and Mrs. Caroline W. Hyam, sisters of Mrs. Blundon. The sisters also are given cash bequests of $2,000 each. The will provides for a number of other bequests to relatives.

District Residents Want Part in National Affairs, Senators Told

Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who attended the hearing with McCarran:

"Senators, I consider that you are confronted with the rare privilege of doing your part toward the righting of a great wrong which has existed a long while. These people of the District of Columbia are worthy, they deserve the right to participate in our Government and the Nation needs to remove the un-American condition at its very heart, if it is to represent truly to the world its belief in and practice of democracy.

"It is unthinkable and indefensible that the Capital of the world's greatest democracy should bar its citizens from the rights that are accorded to the citizens of all other democracies."

Capper declared that to his mind "it was clearly an oversight not to have provided in the Constitution" for the participation of Washington residents in the debates of Congress.

Dr. L. F. Schmeckebier, member of the staff of the Brookings Institution and author of exhaustive studies of government in the District, told the committee that abolition of the territorial government in 1874 did not repeal suffrage. But he added, "as all the local officers had been abolished there was no occasion for its exercise."

Schmeckebier, together with Dr. Myer Jacobstein, another Brookings staff member, developed for the committee the historical and technical background for suffrage.

Schmeckebier pointed out that Congress is now obliged to pass District laws that run the gamut from regulation of kite-flying to fixing penalties for murder, but contended that it would be impossible to prevent "Congress from encroaching on the municipal field."

The bearded Brookings scholar maintained that a self-governing municipality should be supreme in its own field, but agreed with Lesh, who said:

"It would be futile for any of us to argue for complete abdication of Congress from consideration of municipal problems."

Citing his representation of a large number of civic organizations, Lesh declared their primary interest to be National representation. The joint committee, he declared, in divided on the question of local autonomy, but not on the principle that Washingtonians should not be denied a voice in the determination of National policies.

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association and vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, described voteless residents of Washington as "political eunuchs."

"Common justice dictates that the people of the National Capital should be given suffrage," he declared. "And the people in the States agree. Foreigners may come to this country and at the end of five years be accorded the right to vote. District residents can't vote though many of them were born here and have raised their children here."

Chief Washington Correspondent of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—How close will be the collaboration in the immediate and distant future between the United States and the British commonwealth?

Shall we follow a parallel course in international affairs?

Is the lease-lend bill the foreshadow of a military and economic alliance?

Will the war take us into a greater federal union more intimate than exists between the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Northern Ireland?

These are inescapable questions which will be answered either by the drift of events, the pre-arranged plans of responsible leaders in this country and the British empire, or both.

Clarence K. Streit proposes that the answer shall be a "Federal Union of the Free," modeled on the Constitution of the United States and the federations of Canada, Australia, South Africa and Switzerland.

The complete blueprint of Streit's latest plan is contained in his "Union Now with Great Britain," 324 meaty, long article about the movement in London and other magazines with large or influential circulations have devoted space to it.

Question In Parliament.

The propaganda became so pronounced in Great Britain that Clement Attlee, leader of the Labor party, demanded assurances in parliament that there would be a full and free discussion of the proposal before the Churchill government seriously considered union with the United States.

This was after Churchill had offered a union with France in the summer of 1940.

The unionists were elated when Churchill disclosed that the personal letter Wendell Willkie brought to him from the president quoted from Longfellow's poem,

"Sail on, O Ship of State,
Sail on, O Union strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,

"Perhaps Streit's hypothesis is impossible, yet he has the distinction of placing before the world the first and most complete proposal for reversing the present trend, which seems to be leading to another great war."

Vision to Thousands.

The world has changed for the worse since February, 1939. The United States is in the war or so close to it that our actual status is debatable.

Streit has communicated his vision to thousands of influential persons here and abroad. His latest work is certain to stir thought and create controversy. Only a rash prophet would declare it has little merit or that it will be the basis of a new world order.

Some day it may be regarded as a co-equal of Hobbes' "Leviathan," Rousseau's "Social Contract" and the "Federalist."

Like Harold Laski, the British student left-winger, Streit believes it is war. That necessary to stimulate result among the Germans and the conquering but resentful citizens of the invaded countries.

"This could be done, he contends, by holding out the hope that they, too, could become citizens of a world-wide federal union of democracies after they had overthrown their totalitarian overlords.

As a result of his lecture tours and his correspondence, Streit includes in the present book 24 pages of questions and answers on the prospective working of his plan.

The appendix contains his draft of an illustrative "declaration of inter-dependence and union," and an illustrative "constitution" which reads remarkably like the American document.

Changes.

Slight changes have been necessary in the "Federal Union" plan since it was first published until after the next world war. That review ended with these words:

"Perhaps Streit's hypothesis is impossible, yet he has the distinction of placing before the world the first and most complete proposal for reversing the present trend, which seems to be leading to another great war."

Vision to Thousands.

The world has changed for the worse since February, 1939. The United States is in the war or so close to it that our actual status is debatable.

Keith High Command Decrees a May Jubilee

Many Impressive Pictures in Line-Up; The Guild Changes Title of Its New Play; This, That and the Other About the Theater

BELL

INSPIRED BY AN IMPOSING ARRAY of features ready for release in immediately impending weeks, the RKO-Theaters' high command has gone and churned itself up a gay business that is to be known as "RKO's Maytime Movie Jubilee." It would have been all right with this department if they had substituted some other word for "Movie," because we have long held that the cinema has outgrown the diminutive descriptive that applied so aptly to it in the remote nickelodeon days. However, that is beside the point.

The point is that this spring gesture on the part of RKO will find its local expression on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. The "Jubilee" will be inaugurated on April 24 and will run through May 28. The screen subjects that are being made the basis of this celebration include Loretta Young in "The Lady from Cheyenne"; Marlene Dietrich and Bruce Cabot—not to mention Andy Devine—in "The Flame of New Orleans"; Brian Aherne and Kay Francis in "The Man Who Lost Himself," and the most-talked-of picture of the year, Orson Welles' production of "Citizen Kane." It is also a possibility that Ginger Rogers' new starrer, "Tom, Dick and Harry," will be ready for the gala period.

The chronology of the releases, according to last-minute word from Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, still is a bit on the tentative side. Maybe "Citizen Kane" will not get here quite in time to make the May 28 deadline. Then, again, it may. Something of the same speculation pertains in the case of "Tom, Dick and Harry," although we entertain an abiding dread of sticking out the fragile old chin.

At any rate, there are enough A-1 films on the RKO-Keith horizon to make the "Maytime Movie Jubilee" a pretty safe bet for anybody's money.

It was intimated here a few days ago, in a line or two of something or other about auditions for the Roadside Theater, in Thomson School on April 21 and 22, at 7:30 p. m., that the "straw hat" season of the "old red barns" is more or less getting under way. The Roadside's season is in pretty shaky pencil-writing up to now. But Mistress Kitty Pritchard Romney, who has stentored the Roadside for years on end now—this will be the eighth—assures us that the season out on the Rockville Pike, t'other side of Bethesda, will open in June and, as usual, run for 14 weeks, with each bill occupying a fortnight on the cowbarn rostrum. There is still a little doubt as to precisely what the plays will be. There is an effort being made to get hold of some of the old Harry Clay Blaney melodramas and one or two to which William A. Brady still holds the rights. How that will come out, I wouldn't know. Nevertheless, the Roadside will be in there punching this summer.

Crossroads Tries 'Em Out, Too

And right on the heels of all that—to coin another new one—comes the announcement that the Crossroads Theater, that energetic organization that does so well over at Baileys Cross Roads every summer—in another old barn, incidentally, just a hop-skip-and-a-jump from the District down the Columbia Pike—will hold its auditions in the Congressional Room of the Willard Hotel on Friday evening, May 2, at 7:30, with additional listenings on Saturday afternoon, May 3, between 3 and 5:30. If, at the moment, there is any aspiring thespian in Washington who hasn't an acting job, the field would seem to be wide open.

That was a jolly chat with John Golden, producer of "Theatre," starring Cornelia Otis Skinner, at the National, and Author Guy Bolton, Tuesday evening. It lasted about an hour and a half and was supposed to have been devoted to what Mr. Bolton, as coauthor with W. Somerset Maugham, upon whose novel the play is based, planned to do to bolster the dramatic structure of a drama of the playhouse that is almost good enough as it stands. We somehow never got around to that. The conversation, by some peculiar perversity, seemed to dedicate itself to a fine going-over of the last 40 years or so in the theater, without regard to "Theatre." That was too bad. The discrepancy between what we intended to talk about and what we did will be overcome later in the week.

The major trouble seemed to be that John Golden is a year, or two, or three older than your decrepit reporter and looks much younger. His first confession was that he is not a "big-time" theatrical producer, as popular report has it, but at heart still a song-writer. So we shall continue to call him "Poor Butterfly." That's the best song he ever wrote in our book. Come to think of it, neither of us found out how old Guy Bolton is. Must be young, since he's evidently not old enough to brag about it!

Something Seems to Be in Name

So Joe Heidt, of the Theater Guild, stops by the desk to say that the title of the new Carl Zuckmayer-Fritz Kortner play coming into the National on April 28 has been changed from "The Last Round" to "Somewhere in France." It seems that with that first title still appended too many people wanted to know whether or not Jack Dempsey was playing the stellar role.

When-as-and-if Note

It won't be raining rain, you know, it will be raining violets!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 16.

Ralph Bellamy, Thomas Mitchell and Charlotte Greenwood, all oldtimers in the acting profession, agree with me that the passing out of stock is putting a great handicap on our youngsters.

HOPPER

With hardly any experience, they're rushed before the cameras and are expected to carry on like veterans. Then when they don't come through with a mature performance they're in for a panning from the critics and the go-by from their producers. And with a few pannings in this game, you're out.

As Charlotte says, there are more tricks to acting than a pooch has puppies. A youngster's natural personality may carry him for a couple of pictures; but get him out of character and he's lost. Only experience will give you flexibility, and as Tommy Mitchell says, enable you to carry a scene with your shoes on or off. But with millions of dollars sunk into a picture, studios want to buy experience, not give it.

At last Edward Arnold is going to be his real self on the screen—a nice guy. In "Nothing But the Truth" he's Paulette Goddard's uncle. He's more of a comic than a heavy, and getting a kick out of it. "But you know," he tells me, "I believe trouping means being able to deliver whatever they want in any character." Since reading Bayard Kendrick's "The Odor of Violets," he wants to play the blind philosopher-detective with the Seeing-Eye Dog—would even like to do a series around that character. Eddie has it all figured out when he's going back to Broadway—the day he finds himself slipping in Hollywood. I'd say that puts it well in the future.

When Joan Crawford was having her hair fixed by Sidney Guilaroff the other day, the phone rang. She picked it up, pretended to be his secretary, and said to the lady on the other end, "Who is this, please?" The answer came back, "Greta Garbo!"

And speaking of hair, Mary Martin enjoys best, next to picture work, fixing people's hair. She has all the mechanisms, including a dryer, installed in her home. And an afternoon with Mary means you come away with a new hair-do. She's just done another for Edith Head, and it's a beauty . . . After Sunday's show, Phil Harris flew on to New York to spend a few days with the little woman—meaning Alice Faye.

After Director Norman Taurog showed "Men of Boys Town" in Boston, he spoke to the staff of the Harvard Lampoon. Returning good for evil, says I . . . John Howard, Alan Baxter, Francot Tone and Richard Carlson are Hollywood's four Phi Beta Kappa men.

Remember Victor Varconi, who came here to make pictures for Cecil De Mille, liked our country and became a citizen? Well, Victor hasn't been doing so well lately, although he's a fine actor. But he had one true friend that remained faithful—a police dog with whom he took long, solitary rambles nightly. Recently some neighborhood busybody poisoned that pet. A person who would do that is to me worse than a poison-pen writer—about the lowest in the human scale. And there doesn't seem to be any way to punish those people, except through their own conscience, if they've got any.

Betty Grable is setting a record in "Miami." Out of 316 scenes, she's in 314. I don't know the statistics on "Kitty Foyle," but Ginger Rogers must have come pretty close to Betty's record in that one.

Columbia

If you're looking for a strict photographic record of the fabulous play "Tobacco Road," you won't find it at the Columbia Theater, where the screen version of the celebrated drama opens this morning after a previous week at the Palace. What you will find is a treatment of the Erskine Caldwell novel that fathered the play, filmed by the men who pictured "The Grapes of Wrath," with the necessary bows toward the Hays office.

Of cussing and cussing, there are the expletives common to the mild "durns" and "dangs" uttered by Lum and Abner of the airwaves. In place of the lean-to that was home to the stage Lesters, there is the decayed grandeur of another era. Since religion must never seem insincere or crackpot on the nation's screens, Sister Bessie's questionable faith and evident spring feeling now assume the nervous abandon of a Good Woman on a Tear.

It is in the final scenes that the film movingly states what caused Caldwell to write his book and the true meaning, despite the attendant shocks, of the play. Jeeter Lester didn't want to give up his land, no matter what else he did with it and in a deeply affecting auto ride over the hill to the poorhouse and back, this is made gripping and clear. Despite all the innocuous goings-on that have preceded these closing moments, the heart-breaking situation of a man about to lose even what little he has is one of the most tragic emotions of mankind.

It seems too bad that the re-adjustments have made much of "Tobacco Road" dull. The effort for humor is strained by familiar attempts to bring a smile with a tear. The attempts to make Jeeter and his unfortunate associates conform to the norm of respectability drain the essence of their vigor.

Charley Grapewin is the screen Jeeter, Elizabeth Patterson the long-suffering Ada and Marjorie Rambeau the Sister Bessie. William Tracy, Slim Summerville and Gene Tierney also are in the cast. Nunnally Johnson wrote the screen play, John Ford directed and Darryl F. Zanuck produced, the same trio which brought forth last year's far finer "The Grapes of Wrath."

Little

Paul Robeson as Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones" finally succeeded "Night Train" at the Little Theater yesterday morning. The masterful playwright's powerful play is on the Ninth Street screen two months later than previous booking had planned, still a vigorous, memorable picture.

O'Neill's drama, closely adhered to in this telling, followed the South Carolina Negro, Brutus Jones, who became a boastful Pullman Negro, killed his best friend in a fight over a woman and eventually escaped from the chain gang in which he had become a prisoner. Shipping south as a stoker, he jumps overboard and swims to an island to avoid being arrested when the boat docks. Soon he joins a cockney trader in business and becomes an important figure on the island. Only a silver bullet, he boasts to the natives, can kill him. Not knowing he has put blanks in their guns, they imagine him gifted with witchcraft and permit him to become their emperor.

The self-styled "Emperor" Jones rules by fear. When the day finally arrives on which his hold is broken, he attempts to flee to the money he has hidden in Europe. But the Emperor Jones gets lost in a jungle and dies with a silver bullet in his heart.

With the great Negro singing actor, Paul Robeson, in the title role, the film's vitality is carried to a high pitch. In the course of the picture, the one-time All-American football star and present-day concert singer offers "Travelin'," "Water Boy" and "Now Let Me Fly." Dudley Digges, the Theater Guild star; Frank Wilson and Fredi Washington are the cast's other pivotal figures.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 16.

ELSA MAXWELL told this story recently—the story of her trip to Baireuth, in 1931, to see Toscanini conduct at the festival. Elsa went there with Mrs. Huntington Astor, who then was married to Vincent Actor . . . After the festival, they all attended a dinner party at the home of Frau Wagner. At Elsa's left sat Lytell Hull, the columnist. At her right sat a man whose appearance was insignificant. She tried to converse with him in the little German she knew—but he remained silent, unsmiling, unresponsive. She tried French, then English—but still there was no response . . . "Who's your boy friend, Elsa?" asked Lytell Hull . . . "Oh," Elsa shrugged, "I guess he plays a wood-wind in the maestro's orchestra" . . . His name was Adolf Hitler.

LYONS

CARL SANDBURG will write the commentary and do the narration for a national-defense movie to be made by the Federal Government . . . Last night Sandburg attended the dinner given by Farrar & Rinehart and Redbook to the winners of the Latin American prize novel contest. The dress instructions were "black tie." And so for the first time in his life, Sandburg bought a black bow-tie, and wore it. His shirt, however, was blue. "The blue shirt," he explained, "means 'no surrender'."

EACH OF THE AMERICAN speakers at this dinner stressed the Pan American links, and recited the names of their forbears who came from South America. "I can't do that," Sandburg confided later, "because both my parents came from the north of Sweden. But maybe this'll help—they both had black hair and black eyes." . . . In honor of the occasion, Sandburg wore the honor bar presented to all American soldiers, who were with the Army of Occupation in Porto Rico in 1898.

HERMAN SHUMLIN is calling a meeting of the members of the N. Y. League of Theaters to vote on a proposal that the league's antimonopoly suit against the Dramatists' Guild be withdrawn. The suit was brought by the league's board of governors . . . Shumlin also will have a vote on the question of nonparticipation in further actions of this nature, unless the members first approve . . . "The Shanghai Gesture" will be made into a movie . . . Four front-page stories from New York, Washington and Hollywood last weekend—Kirsten Flagstad's return to Oslo; Eicher's appointment as SEC chairman; Jimmy Roosevelt's trip to Yugoslavia, and Douglas Fairbanks' appointment as special envoy—appeared here on February 10, February 25 and April 7 . . . Erika Mann, writer-daughter of Thomas Mann, says: "Among my father's numerous works, I am but an incidental byproduct."

WHEN SIDNEY HILLMAN appeared before a Congressional Committee which was considering antistrike legislation, he was heckled about his C. I. O. office, and about Russia, Lenin, etc. . . . One Congressman finally asked: "Mr. Hillman, did you ever appear on the same platform with W. Z. Foster, the Communist?" . . . The C. I. O. official thought a while before answering and then said: "Yes—once. I remember being on the same platform with him during the steel strike, over 20 years ago. W. Z. Foster then was the A. F. of L. leader, under Gompers, in charge of that strike."

J. P. MORGAN agreed to pose, only for five minutes, for Edward Steichen, the famed photographer. During those five minutes, Steichen made two pictures of Morgan . . . When the financier saw them he destroyed the picture which Steichen thought was the better one . . . Three years later, Morgan requested the remaining photo—a magnificent picture, which he believed to be the best ever taken of him. And after those three years, Steichen had his revenge, for the destruction of that first picture. He charged J. P. Morgan $5,000 for the remaining one—and Morgan paid.

CECIL ROBERTS, the British poet-novelist, is returning to England in two weeks. One of his sons was lost at Dunkirk; the other is in the R. A. F. His home has been bombed—pulverized, so that only the doorstep remains. The officials know which house was Roberts', because to that doorstep each morning comes the family cat, waiting for its food . . . Roberts was Winston Churchill's secretary for two years. Last night he told of the manner in which the Prime Minister always writes his speeches: Churchill first walks around the room, muttering phrases which his stenograper records. Then he repeats the same phrases, aloud. The stenographer records that too. "Same thing?" Churchill asks her. She nods, and Churchill says: "Then let's go to the next."

O'Conor's Veto Ends Dispute Over Jai Alai

Gov. O'Conor of Maryland, yesterday vetoed the bill for a referendum on legalizing jai alai betting in Montgomery County, thus ending a spirited two-weeks controversy over the measure.

The Governor's veto had been expected since a week ago when the Montgomery legislators who sponsored the bill reversed their stand in the face of overwhelming opposition principally from church and civic groups.

The jai alai bill, passed in the last two days of the legislative session which ended April 1, provided for pari-mutuel betting from which both the county and State would derive considerable revenue. The measure further provided that the jai alai court should be erected near the District line at a cost of at least $250,000.

The game of jai alai originated in the Basque country of Spain and enjoys widespread popularity in many of the Spanish-American countries. Similar to tennis, it is a strenuous game requiring a high degree of skill.

Chief criticism of the measure was that "it would bring an undesirable gambling element into the county." The Washington Federation of Churches joined county groups in urging the Governor to veto the bill.

In vetoing the bill, Gov. O'Conor said in part:

"Since the adjournment of the Legislature considerable opposition has been expressed and citizens of the county have protested vigorously against the enactment becoming law. So definite has been this expression of disapproval that the sponsors of the measure publicly announced their desire that I veto it. The county commissioners of Montgomery County have also signified their desire that this bill be disapproved.

"I consider that I am acting in accordance with the wishes of the great majority of the people in this county and also in fulfillment of the expressed wishes of the delegates sponsoring the ball when I veto the measure, which action is not to be construed as reflecting upon the motives of the delegates in question."

Leaders of the fight against the bill expressed their gratification over the Governor's action.

"The Governor has done what I think he should have done," said the Rev. Ralph D. Smith, president of the Montgomery County Ministerial League. "If the Legislators attempt to put through objectionable legislation again at the eleventh hour, we will rise up again to oppose it," he added.

Others Give Approval

O. M. Kile, president of the county civic federation, said he was "gratified and pleased, but not surprised. It was the logical and proper thing to do," he declared. Kile was the first to oppose the measure.

George III's Beard Sold Back To British; R. A. F. Gets $10

GOING, GOING, GONE!—Elsa Maxwell (top), the one gal who can poke fun at society and make 'em like it, calls for bids on a cane at the R. A. F. benefit auction last night. Lower—A general view of the sale, sponsored by Piccadilly Arcade, in the Anderson mansion, 2118 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest

Elsa Maxwell knocked down a piece of King George III's beard for $10 last night as a goodly portion of lorgnetted and monocled Washington participated in an auction for the Royal Air Force.

At least, officials of the Picadilly Arcade, sponsor of the auction at elegant Anderson house, 2108 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, swore it was part of the King's beard. But for the life of them, they couldn't say where it came from other than it was cut off by "Mr. Pennington."

"Mr. Pennington," explained Miss Maxwell, to the audience's mild amusement, "was his late majesty's keeper." She added: "And this is not a joke."

For $10, the beard went to the gentleman on Miss Maxwell's right, Winthrop Crane, of the British Embassy.

Breckinridge Long, assistant secretary of State, bought an autographed copy of President Roosevelt's third inaugural speech for $20, and everybody thought that was rather gallant because he doubtless could have gotten one for nothing.

Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the Solicitor General of the United States, bought a China platter for $35. Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador, also was present for a few minutes, but she bought nothing.

Others in the audience included Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter and Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister, and Mrs. Casey.

The auction block was shared by Miss Maxwell, the famed party giver; Richard Myers, director of the New York Philharmonic, and Robert Lincoln O'Brien, former publisher of the Boston Herald.

They knocked down a variety of articles, many of them left over from the Picadilly Arcade sale held here two weeks ago and others, including the king's beard, which had been reserved especially for the occasion.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 16 (INS).—Henry Fonda and Barbara Stanwyck, both of whom got new leases on their careers going "vexy" (as the advertisements coyly put it) in "The Lady Eve" will be teamed again, which is news. The wire came to our plane on the way back from Mexico that Columbia has signed Barbara and Hank for the co-stars of "The Doctor's Husband," the Wesley Ruggles picture that all but put Wes in the hospital lining up the proper cast. Well, he has a combination now that should certainly put a smile on the faces of the exhibitors who played "The Lady Eve."

PARSONS

More interesting news about Barbara's Columbia deal is that "The Doctor's Husband" will be her first picture on a brand-new contract calling for two pictures a year over a period of three years.

Paulette Goddard, who almost played Scarlett O'Hara before Vivien Leigh came along, is going to get a chance to be as spitfirish as she pleases in "Reap the Wild Wind." After testing almost every actress in own, Cecil B. De Mille decided that Paulette, who was so vivid in his "Northwest Mounted Police," was exactly right for the Southern siren.

Next to Bette Davis, the best femme role in "The Little Foxes" is Birdie, the dipsomaniac sister-in-law, and today Sam Goldwyn signed Patricia Collinge, who played it on Broadway, for the part. Well, I must say, competition in the cast has never worried Bette, even though she is sure to get it from this fine stage actress who has never appeared on the screen before.

The most costly picture ever produced at Twentieth Century-Fox will be "How Green Was My Valley," the Richard Llewellyn best seller of life among Welsh miners, that has already sold over 450,000 copies in the United States. It was first planned that John Ford would take a camera crew to Wales to get authentic backgrounds—but with war conditions what they are, that is impossible. So 2,000 acres in the San Fernando Valley, 40 miles away from Los Angeles, have been turned into a replica of the Welsh countryside and $109,000 has been spent in erecting the Welsh village.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Contracts Let To Speed Ship Building Plan

By Charles Hurd.

Copyright by New York Times

The "bridge-of-ships" program to supply Great Britain with 212 freighters under the lease-lend law started yesterday with award of contracts for construction of 32 out of a total of 56 ways in which the ships will be built.

The announcement of contract awards to eight companies was made by the Maritime Commission, with the approval of the Office of Production Management, coincident with the advancement of other plans to divert more American vessels into routes where they can be of direct aid to Great Britain.

The ways for which contracts were let will provide for construction within two years of an estimated 112 ships out of the total of 212, it was said by informed officials. Contracts for the remaining ways will be awarded within a few days.

The immediate list of contracts involves estimated expenditure of $22,507,150, or about $650,000 for each unit. From three to four ships can be constructed in each way in the next two years, depending on type.

Companies awarded the contracts yesterday were the California Shipbuilding Corporation, Los Angeles; Oregon Shipbuilding Corporation, Portland, Oreg.; Richmond Shipbuilding Corportion, Richmond, Calif.; Houston Shipbuilding Corporation, Houston, Tex.; North Carolina Shipbuilding Corporation, Wilmington, N. C.; Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., Baltimore, Md.; Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Corporation, Seattle, and Pennsylvania Shipyards, Inc.

No special type of freighter will be built for the British service under this program, President Roosevelt said, but rather the program will be adapted to those types with which builders are familiar or which can most easily be adapted to the facilities available.

The British shipping problem was among questions discussed yesterday in a conference between Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State; Nevile Butler, Minister-Counselor of the British Embassy, and Richard G. Casey, Minister of Australia.

The substance of this conversation was not described by the participants, and there was no intimation that decisions were reached, but the conference again drew attention to plans of this Government to augment shipping services in the Pacific Ocean in order to release as much British tonnage as possible for transport either in the Atlantic Ocean or between British ports and the Far East.

Sixth of Tin U. S. Consumes Found To Be Recoverable

Office of Production Management experts concerned with a possible shortage of tin, received a report yesterday from a National Academy of Sciences committee that a maximum of 12,000 long tons of the metal, or more than one-sixth of the Nation's annual consumption, might be recovered yearly from an intensive collection campaign of used cans.

The committee said, however, the cost would be such as to make it economically inadvisable for "venture" capital, and that it should be undertaken only if "it became imperative to conserve tin regardless of the cost."

At the same time, representatives of the industry conferring with OPM experts indicated that they could save 10 per cent of the tin now used in tin cans by reducing the thickness of the plating. This is feasible, it was indicated, in almost all cans except those used for kraut, baby food and high acid fruit canning.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way to take excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

The Issue Is Democracy

The hearings on the Capper-Sumners resolution again present to Congress the clear-cut issue of Americanizing the District of Columbia. Denial of suffrage in any form to residents of this area is the most patent inconsistency in our democratic system. Washington is known throughout the world as the Capital of a great democracy which is denied any vestige of self-government. At a time when the Nation is mobilizing to defend the principle of government by the people it is difficult to see how Congress can ignore this plea of disfranchised citizens for restoration of their rights.

Washingtonians are being trained along with other men from every city and State in the grim business of defending their country with arms. That, of course, is right and proper. But under the present setup these District men must be prepared to fight for rights that are denied to them. This gross discrimination can no longer be excused on the ground that only a handful of people are affected. Today a city of approximately 700,000 Americans lives under a cloud of freakish and arbitrary rule in which its inhabitants have no part.

The Capper-Sumners resolution is well designed to raise this issue, for it is only a grant of power to Congress to remedy the situation. It rises above all the controversies over what type of government the District should have and the extent of its representation in Congress. It leaves no question whatsoever as to the continued supremacy of Congress over the Capital. Any one believing in democracy for all the people can indorse it without reservations. Being a proposed amendment to the Constitution, it naturally leaves many problems unsolved. But these could doubtless be disposed of in Congress once the people have established the principle that District residents are to be accorded the rights of other American citizens.

The surprising thing is that Washingtonians should have to beg for rights that are everywhere else in this country taken for granted. Whatever may have been done in the past, this is certainly no time to quibble over adjustments to bring the benefits of democracy into the Capital itself. Congress can meet this challenge in only one way that will be consistent with basic American principles—by passing the resolution.

Contempt Of Court

Punishment for contempt of court is a weapon that may be easily abused, as the United States' early experience with contempt cases proved. It is reassuring therefore to have the Supreme Court limit the scope of this power to cases involving misbehavior in the vicinity of the court. As reinterpreted by the Court on Monday the statute of 1831 does not permit Federal tribunals to inflict summary punishment upon everyone who is guilty of obstructing justice. Contempt proceedings may be used hereafter only in cases of misbehavior in or near the courtroom tending to disrupt orderly judicial procedure.

In the case just decided the lower court had found two men guilty of contempt for bringing about the dismissal of a suit of an illiterate person. This alleged obstruction of justice took place more than 100 miles away from the courtroom. The statute limits contempt proceedings to cases of "misbehavior of any person or persons in the presence of the said court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice." Back in 1918 the Supreme Court made the dubious assumption that "so near thereto" referred to the proximate cause of obstructions to justice. Now the Court, over the dissent of Justice Stone supported by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts, has given those words only geographical meaning. That interpretation appears to reflect the intent of Congress and it will have the obviously desirable effect of forcing the courts to use their contempt weapon sparingly.

Of course, this decision does not mean that obstructors of justice should escape punishment. As Justice Douglas pointed out in the majority opinion, the same act which narrowed the contempt powers prescribed penalties for persons interfering with the administration of justice. Unless such offenses tend to disturb the courts in the conduct of their business, however, they should be dealt with by the routine procedure of indictment and trial by jury. The effect of the decision is simply to narrow the category of cases for which trial by jury is denied. Apparently courts may now be criticized through the press with assurance that editors will not be haled before irate judges for summary punishment. The practice of referring charges of this type to juries is certainly more consistent with American democracy than that which has prevailed in recent years.

Taxing The Goose

Congressional leaders and Treasury officials are expected to get together this week to discuss ways and means of obtaining additional revenue to help cover the cost of defense. It is said that the proposals under consideration call for a 100 per cent increase in the normal income-tax rate and higher levies on corporate incomes, excess profits, inheritances and gifts. A tax program of this kind, involving nothing more intricate than an upward adjustment of existing rates, might appeal to Congress as an easy legislative way of solving a difficult problem. But if the aim is—as it should be—to obtain a maximum amount of revenue with a minimum degree of interference with productive activity, such a program would be both inadequate and obstructive.

Dr. B. M. Anderson, an economist with academic training and practical experience, has likened the tax burden of the American people to the load carried by pack animals. He points out that even light weights can't be successfully carried unless the load is carefully adjusted. The tax load must, he says, "be a load that fits well. That means that it must be placed where the income of the people is." Since a preponderant proportion of the Nation's income goes to labor in the form of wages and salaries—well over 70 per cent, according to Dr. Anderson's estimate—it follows inevitably that we shall have to rely increasingly upon wage earners and people of small means to contribute more liberally to the support of their Government.

This is plain common sense. Merely to raise normal income-tax rates to 8 per cent, for example, without changes in existing exemptions and credits, would still leave the great majority of heads of families entirely immune from taxation. More taxation at the top is no alternative. As we have previously pointed out, there are indications that the law of diminishing returns is already operating to cut down revenue from taxes in the highest income brackets. In other words, increases in surtax rates in some heavily taxed top income brackets have been followed by actual declines in tax receipts. In any event, complete confiscation would not yield very large returns in the highest income groups where Federal taxes alone are already absorbing from 50 to 65 per cent of income.

As to corporate taxes, the raising further of the already very high levies applicable to corporate earnings would tend to retard industrial expansion and hamper defense preparations. It is true that some concerns are currently making large profits because of the defense program. Yet the fact remains that corporate taxes are cutting heavily into earnings, as we showed in recent tabulations. Significant of this fact is that commercial banks and the Government, through the RFC, have so far been the chief sources of funds needed to extend production facilities and supply working capital to defense industries. The private investor who in the past would have put their savings in new capital issues are holding back, since the incentive to risk private funds in such undertakings has been weakened by heavy corporate taxes and by fears of increases to come.

Penalty taxes that dry up sources of income and taxes that hamper industrial activity are thus not the answer to Mr. Morgenthau's fiscal problem. To raise the revenue needed we must impose more consumption taxes in the form of special excises or general sales taxes, or else we must radically lower income-tax exemptions so as to bring millions of now exempt individuals within the scope of the income-tax laws.

Prison Break

Four men are dead as the result of a desperate attempt by three long-term convicts to escape from Sing Sing prison. One of the dead was an unarmed prison guard, who was slain, it would seem, merely to prevent him from giving an alarm. Another was a policeman who was shot at the wheel of his scout car in the main street of Ossining, N. Y. The third was one of the fugitive convicts who was killed by a police bullet. The fourth was another convict who appears to have died of sheer excitement, and was not involved in the break. There might have been still another death had the two surviving fugitives not changed their minds about killing the fisherman whom they had forced at pistol point to row them to the opposite side of the Hudson. They were later tracked down, surrounded and captured in the wilds of Palisades Park.

Those who read newspaper accounts of the break must have been strongly impressed by two points: One is that the plan of escape had been prepared for the better part of a year and involved a considerable degree of outside collaboration. The weapons used to kill the guard and policemen were smuggled into the prison yard underneath a truck. An automobile containing a submachine gun, according to the New York State police, had been parked near the prison for the use of the fugitives. And by one means or another the convicts managed to obtain keys to at least three locks. The other point is the almost subhuman ferocity of the convicts in attempting to execute the plan.

One must rejoice that men so dangerous were so quickly recaptured. And yet the biographies of these men as inscribed in police records offer another melancholy commentary on the failures of our American penal systems. The record of each of the convicts goes back to childhood or early youth, and one of them is middle-aged. The almost inevitable sequel to the protectory and the reform school is the penitentiary. And the sequel to the penitentiary may be the death house.

Only on the theory of congenital depravity can society and its law-enforcement and penal machinery be cleared of some responsibility for the progressive moral atrophy manifest in habitual criminals. These men obviously did not lack friends and sympathizers outside. And it is a terrible thought that, if their crimes had been motivated by political fanaticism instead of by egoism and antisocial desperation, their sympathizers would not have been confined to the underworld.

Defense Progress

The magnitude of the war effort made by the United States in 1917-1918 and its decisive character are now a matter of history. What few Americans realize at present is how far short we fell during the period of our participation in World War I in producing adequate supplies for the huge Army we raised at that time. This fact is clearly brought out by Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson in his testimony before the special Senate committee investigating defense. Although 19 months elapsed between our declaration of war on Germany and the signing of the armistice, all the heavy artillery, tanks and planes used by the A. E. F. in combat had to be supplied by our associates. Had the A. E. F. been dependent on our industrial effort alone, it could not have gone into action before the summer of 1919.

It is against the background of this experience that our present efforts to raise and equip an army must be judged. From this viewpoint it becomes at once apparent that, despite confusion, difficulties and delays, the job is being done well and quickly. In spite of the greater complexity of modern weapons, the Secretary of War points out, we shall "do the job from eight months to one year faster than we were doing it then." Here is at least one encouraging point in the present outlook.

Mr. Stimson also emphasizes with equal realism the problem still before us. First of all, he said, the world situation demands that we "create here in America large forces which are fully trained to operate in a war of movement." Secondly, "these forces must be armed and trained for a new kind of mechanized warfare involving huge numbers of new and specialized weapons." Thirdly, "every one of these weapons must be built in this country." The Secretary declared that the men we are now training must be prepared for the possibilities of war "in many and varied terrains," including North, Central or South America or "even possibly other regions."

Mr. Stimson expressed no opinion as to whether the one-year term for selectees may have to be raised in order to produce an Army of great technical skill in handling complicated modern weapons and in carrying out coordinated movements. But this issue will have to be faced. Indeed, the problem of revising the Selective Service Act so as to enable this Nation to achieve the maximum of military effectiveness with a minimum dislocation to American life and industry now demands a thorough canvassing. The Army has done a good job under great difficulties. But there is no time for self-congratulation or complacency. We are only at the beginning of our effort.

STARLINGS

The scarlet light of sunset
Is suddenly black with birds.
They come with a rush and a tumult
As wild as the wind, their words
Are querulous over the meadows,
Quarreling whether to light,
Or whether to take their pell-mell
Way on a non-stop flight
On to the far Lake's rushes;
But although the new grain calls,
They swoop and swing, then level
Their flight, for the night falls
Swift and dark on the marshes,
And birds, like men who roam,
Find in their breasts at evening
The swift desire for home.

National Kindness Week

Despite the more widespread orgies of war this year than last, time goes on and anniversaries still occur. Because of the cruelties of many evils that man brings upon himself and all the world, it is all the more important that anniversaries that center thought upon his noble virtues against his sins be more deeply observed for their uplifting influences. Thus it is that National Kindness Week, April 21 to 26, to be opened by the Humane Society on April 20, should be most widely recognized this year.

It is fitting that we pause a while to concentrate attention upon the objects of Kindness Week—with mercy and kindness toward the unfortunate of mankind and upon our lesser brethren, the animals, and especially toward those in the war-torn parts of the world, and in upbuilding our children's characters with special lessons upon these virtues as exhorted in the Scriptures. The greatest benefactors of the human race started their merciful careers in simple acts of kindness to surrounding children and animal friends. Today such names as St. Francis, Florence Nightingale, Abraham Lincoln, Henry Bergh, shine like stars in human history.

This year marks the diamond jubilee in our country for humane work for the protection of children and animals. The man who started the first society for prevention of cruelties to animals was Henry Bergh. The American S. P. C. A. in New York City, followed by many others, is a living monument to his endeavors.

Richard Crooks

For many thousands the joy of Easter Day was climaxed by Richard Crooks' matchless rendition of Cesar Franck's "O Lord Most Holy." May this divinely gifted artist, Mr. Crooks, and others like him, live long and happily and continue to enrich the lives of people everywhere, particularly those of invalids and of shut-ins. The world needs as never before more music and more poetry.

Pacifism

Many clergymen in this country are pacifists. They are against all open war. And many in their congregations have reached a point of open disagreement with them, in the face of what seem to be the facts. The question seems to be: "Just who is to do the killing, and who is to be killed?" That is the horrible but inescapable proposition.

At the time of the Munich pact, most of our leading clergymen in this country and England backed Chamberlain. But I wonder if anyone can even count the deaths that have been the result of that pact! How many young Czechs have been killed, or have died of malnutrition, or heartbreak, or open resistance to the intolerable; how many young men have been forced into slave labor in the Skoda arms plant, making bombs to kill British civilians? How many people have died in Czechoslovakia because their means of subsistence was taken away by brute force? Nearly $4,000,000,000 worth of Czech belongings were looted by the Germans, not counting the ammunition, etc.

Christians are going to be involved in killings and deaths these days, no matter which side they ally themselves with. Pacifists may be willing to be martyrs themselves—but they don't martyr merely themselves; they pave the way for thousands of other innocent deaths.

The question seems to be something like this: Are men going to fight out in the open "on the record"—trained soldiers fighting trained soldiers; or are people going to take no stand, no "risk" at all—which means collaboration with the aggressor, thereby making it possible for him to go on with his killing of those not in a position to defend themselves?

For Convoys

The outcome of the present battle between the Nazis and the Allies in Greece will foretell the future activity of the United States in the present conflict.

If the Allies lose the battle of Greece—if the Nazis press onward and are allowed to "protect" Turkey as they are "protecting" the rest of the Continent of Europe—if the Nazis are then enabled to press a new pincer movement on Suez by way of Turkey and Egypt, then we Americans will realize that, at some time in the future, we may have to win the war alone.

We, therefore, realize the urgency of rushing supplies to Greece, Yugoslavia and Britain. We must take upon ourselves the responsibility of their delivery. We must overcome the fear of becoming involved through the belligerent act of convoying supplies directly to the scenes of battles. For we now know that Germany, through fear of antagonizing us, has overlooked all our acts of friendship to her enemies. We have sponsored a policy of material aid to Britain; we have transferred 50 over-age destroyers to augment the British convoy fleet; we have passed the lease-lend bill which, among other things, killed the "cash" clause of "cash and carry." It is now up to us to bury the latter half of that out-dated phrase and "carry" the necessary supplies to the places where they are most needed.

TOBY L. SLEY.
Philadelphia, Pa., April 14.

In regard to Arthur K. Norris, who wrote a timid letter in The Post of April 12, saying he was afraid convoys will get us in war and that the American public is against war. Now, I'm for 100 per cent aid to Great Britain in any way at all, and let war come when it may. I'm just as much an American as any other person living in this country, barring none. We helped down the enemy in 1918 and we've got to do it again. There's no use trying to slink away from it this time.

I don't want to be diplomatic; I want to be curt, plain, blunt, in saying we ought to get ready now and strike hard and sure at the Axis. I'm not a warmonger, but I have got the guts to put up a fight between right and wrong.

Dumbarton Oaks

I hope that everyone who can will go to the Dumbarton Oaks Park while the daffodils are "fluttering and dancing in the breeze." After a long, steep, down-grade walk over cobble stones I entered the park. Out of the blue, Wordsworth's "Daffodils" flashed into my mind. I found myself thinking:

"I wandered lonely as a cloud
That floats on high o'er vale and hills
When all at once I saw a crowd,
A host of golden daffodils;
Beside the lake, beneath the trees,
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze."

You feel that you must truly be in the English Lake Country of Wordsworth's day.

"Continuous as the stars that shine
And twinkle on the milky way,
They stretch in never-ending line
Along the margin of the bay—"

Of The Urgent Need For Unity

Representative Hatton Sumners, of Texas, made a radio appeal for public support for unity recently. Though his appeal was chiefly directed at union labor leaders and industrialists who are in huddles over whether union workers' demands should be met, the Congressman did infer that all the people seemed hopelessly divided, and this he saw as a bad omen in a national emergency.

Representative Sumners did not point out the factors which have kept the people divided. Some of these factors are the propagandists who have constantly bombarded this country with their propaganda programs. There has been entirely too much propaganda, with its phases of spy scares, Fifth Column scares, submarine scares; hysteria has been rampant, with foreign writers leading the way, followed by foreign lecturers and diplomats who have tried to influence the people. Add to these, the annual crop of fear stories; threat of censorship and dictatorship, the Hoover food program, the convoying issue, and the free press vs. Government issues, and you have the material that has divided our people.

It is up to every one of us to do our part, even though some of us may only be able to give a pittance, toward the support of our country. It is up to the industrialist to see to it that the men under him are paid well for their toil, and it is up to the worker to do his best to turn out the work. Since we are in a national emergency all contracts should be continued, changed slightly only during arbitration, and workers should be allowed to continue on the job while new contracts are being arranged. In this way the defense program also continues.

I am not now nor have I ever been of that class that believes outbreak of war solves economic problems, especially grievances between capital and labor. As was shown by the debacle that swept the world after the last war, wars only bring more trials, more hardships, more panics and still more reasons for revenge. War is not the remedy for the world's ills.

Those who are engaged in war today are there because they did not have the patience to settle their differences amiably across the conference table. But since there are groups at war, and since war spreads like fever, it pays the well country to set up a defense to fight off that disease. We can do it, man for man, woman for woman, and child for child, if and when we decide that delay on meeting the emergency is the first germ and must be eradicated from the national arm. If we decide to let the germ get into the blood stream it may be too late to cure the national life. The people must make the decision.

The Post Impressionist

The Grass Is Green

There comes a time in every man's life when his son, should he have one, is old enough to mow the lawn. That is indeed a gala occasion, a day of fulfillment, a time of human harvest. It is one of the first indications to come that the "old man" must yield to youth, and the prospect is not displeasing to him. He begins to realize that he himself is like the grass of the field—here today, but tomorrow cast into the oven. But this doleful thought is mitigated by the happy realization that at last, after 25 to 40 years of clitter-clatter, he can now turn over the lawn mower to less competent but adequate hands.

I remember one summer night a few years ago when I sat contemplating, even anticipating, this joyous event in my own life. My two sons were barely out of bibs. A sort of cacoethes scribendi, incited no doubt by the muse of lyric poetry, seized me, and I wrote the following prophetic lines:

When I was just a little lad,
Before I gathered brawn,
I used to help my dear old dad
To mow his darned old lawn.

It seemed a 40-acre lot,
And oft, just after dawn,
You'd see me leave my little cot
To mow the darned old lawn.

And now that I've become a man
And have some grass my own,
It's managed by the self-same plan—
I mow it all alone.

But now I have two beamish boys
Whose babyhood is gone;
And some day soon they'll leave their toys
And mow my darned old lawn.

Now that day has arrived, and I can look out my study windows across my modest little patch of greenery and see two stalwart, brawny youths cutting my grass. It is a wonderfully inspiring sight. Occasionally I can hear their childish laughter. Their joyous voices mingle with the noise of the lawn mower. One of them is calling to me. "Pop," he yells, "when do I get my quarter?" And I hear the other one saying under his breath, "I bet the old buzzard never mowed a lawn in his life!"

Never mowed a lawn, indeed! Why, boy, I was the Maud Muller of my day. And our lawn, I may add, was a luxurious whopper. Besides that, it lay on an imposing and none too gentle slope from the road to the house. Mowing was at least half uphill work. Usually the grass had been let go too long, and mowing was a series of dots and dashes, stops and starts, umphs and grunts. Why, I used to have calluses across my stomach where the lawn mower handle poked me.

Mowing the lawn, however, was recreation in comparison to some of the other grass-gathering we had to do. There was a good deal of alfalfa and timothy and other agrostological fodder to be got into the barn. This had to be done, true to tradition, while the sun shone. And as I remember it, now, the sun always shone.

It is all right to remember such bucolic affairs in the mellow light and sentimental shadow of reminiscence, but haying was hard work, especially for one to whom pursuits other than those agricultural were more alluring. I recall what Hamlin Garland once said about haying. Mr. Garland had very little sentiment about "the merry, merry farmer" or the "sweet breath of kine." For him it required a lapse of years for the duties of the farmer's existence to take on the aspect of the beautiful. He said: "Pitching odorous timothy in a poem and actually putting it into a hay mow with the temperature at 98 degrees in the shade are widely separated in fact as they should be in fiction." That, methinks, is a paragon of understatement.

Still, haying was a rather exciting time, and there was some of it I didn't mind so much. I liked to ride the mowing machine pretty well. With a big straw hat, an intelligent span of horses, a jug of cold tea, and some sharp knives for the cutting bar, a person could have a fairly pleasant day of it. Raking, too, wasn't so bad, though it was harder to stay awake at it. My cousin Harry went to sleep riding a hayrake once and fell backwards off the seat, but lived to tell the tale. My sister-in-law Ruth was thrown forward off a hayrake when the horses took it into their heads to run away. Miraculously, the rake dumped its load, and Ruth, stunned but still conscious, was deposited into the impromptu windrow, and the horses so far as I know, are going yet.

The tough job was pitching the hay onto the wagon, or, if you had a mechanical hay loader, keeping ahead of the tangled mass flowing up to you. Putting the hay away in the mow was also no cinch. It was dusty, dirty, and hot, and by the time you had put away a dozen loads or so you were the most miserable creature alive. And pity the poor soul who happened to be susceptible to hay fever. The hayfield, the barn the whole farm was a ragweed paradise. Allergies lurked in every fence corner. My chief allergy, however, so my parents say, was to all laborious farm work.

I am willing to give haying all its due, viewed now from a distance. But, frankly, I would rather write about it than indulge in it. But, boys, it's wonderful experience. Mowing the lawn is, too. And I am glad now to turn over the old lawn mower to you. And some day I hope you'll have a summer or two on a real farm and be privileged to mow away 100 loads of hay. It'll put hair on your chests.

But, come, get going there with that lawn mower—you've rested long enough!

Today And Tomorrow

Hitler's Victories

HAD THERE COME to pass the miracle which no one had the smallest reason to expect, had Hitler been defeated in the Balkans as Mussolini was defeated, a brilliant prospect would have indeed been opened that the turning point of the struggle had been reached. Instead of this miracle, the obvious seems to be happening in that we see, what we have known since last June, that there is no army in continental Europe which can in open battle defeat the German army.

LIPPMANN

What still remains to be proved—and on it the whole course of the war depends—is whether the German army which has been winning all its battles on the continent can win a decision in the war, or even on the continent itself. Napoleon was never able to do this, though he conquered all and more than Hitler has as yet conquered. To win a decision on the continent in the territory occupied by the German armies, Hitler must establish a state of affairs from Norway to Greece, from Poland to France, in which a withdrawal of most of his occupying forces would not be followed by the kind of national uprising which occurred in Prussia against Napoleon, just the other day in Yugoslavia against Hitler. In this crucial sense Hitler has won all his European battles but not the war, even in continental Europe. For a nation is not really conquered if the occupying army cannot leave and be demobilized.

IT IS FOR THIS reason, if for no other, that Hitler cannot hope to consummate his military victories in Europe unless he can defeat Great Britain and reduce all resistance in the outer world. For as long as Britain stands and behind her there accumulates the power of America, every self-respecting person in every occupied country is his potential enemy. Hitler must stand on guard at every port in Europe and on all the coast line of Europe, and at every airfield and railroad junction of the continent, to suppress national rebellion from within fomented and assisted by landing parties and supplies from overseas.

There is not a nation in Europe which is his willing and trustworthy ally, and everywhere there are not only the peoples waiting for the opportunity to rise against him but also their legitimate governments preparing to lead them. Even in the peculiar case of France, there is no serious doubt as to what the French people would do if they had the chance to rise up, or any doubt that there would then be a French government to lead them. So Hitler cannot make peace with the nations he has conquered: he must continue to occupy them and because he must occupy them, he will oppress them and so antagonize them. It is conceivable theoretically perhaps that an occupying army could win the friendship of an occupied people. But this is not conceivable in the case of the Gestapo and the Nazi party officials. They can hope to remain in the conquered countries only if the army remains to protect them.

BECAUSE HITLER is unable to make peace with the countries he has already conquered, he is inexorably compelled to attempt new conquests. He is compelled because the British resistance makes his empire in continental Europe unmanageable except by vast armies of occupation. But he is compelled for another reason to expand his aggression: "War in my hands," said Napoleon to his confidential adviser, Count Narbonne, "was the antidote to anarchy."

Hitlerian Europe, in spite of the Quislings and the Lavals, is a smouldering anarchy kept by the German army from bursting into flames. It is not a New Order. Europe can be exploited by Hitler for the purposes of war: he can use it as the base of attack, he can loot it to supply himself, he can force much of Europe to work for his armed forces. But he cannot convert his empire into something that will stand and will work for the purposes of peace. Since he cannot evacuate his armies, he cannot obtain anything like a genuine collaboration. Because he must exploit his conquests to feed his military machine, he cannot give the conquered peoples work, except military work, or enable them to earn a living except in the service of his armies. Hitler is committed to the occupation of Europe, to the fact that Germany cannot demobilize, to the fact that there is no way of turning back to civilian commerce. Thus his Europe is potential anarchy because everyone wants to rebel, and in increasing misery because so little productive work is possible. In the midst of the anarchy and the misery, there stands his superb army. The only remedy for the condition open to him is to use the great weapon he possesses. With his army he must hope to destroy the resistance abroad that makes unmanageable his empire in Europe; by expanding the war he must hope to obtain by conquest the supplies to keep going his empire. Like Napoleon he must make war, and he is making war, and will go on making war, because in his hands war is the antidote to anarchy.

WE MAY BE SURE, therefore, that whatever the outcome of the campaign in the Balkans, in the Middle East or in Africa, the net result of the battles he wins will not be to shorten the struggle and decide it but to expand the struggle into other continents and to prolong it. Those who do not believe this have not realized that the life history and inevitable destiny of the great conqueror is to continue to conquer.

When Metternich told Napoleon that "The world needs peace; to ensure it, you must retire within territories consistent with general tranquillity, or you will succumb in the struggle," Napoleon replied: "Never! I shall know how to die, but I shall not part with a single clod of earth. Sovereigns born on their thrones can lose a thousand battles, and each time retire to their capital. But I am only a soldier of fortune, and would cease to reign the day I ceased to be the stronger and no longer commanded respect." The conquerors cannot sit still and be quiet. "Aut Caesar, aut nullus," said the petty Italian tyrant Caesar Borgia, meaning that he must be emperor or nothing at all. This is the destiny of the conquerors—to go on as Alexander did until he sighs for new worlds to conquer, as the Roman Caesars did until they had reached the limits of the civilized world, as Napoleon did—though many attempts were made to negotiate peace with him—until he had raised his victims against him and he fell at Waterloo.

Italians Heckle Nazi Prison Mates in Athens

By A. C. Sedgwick

Copyright by New York Times

Athens, April 16.—Tonight parts of Athens are placarded with posters which appear to depict Reichsfuehrer Hitler in conversation with a Greek soldier. In the background is a long list of countries now under German domination—France, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania, Bulgaria, etc. The Greek soldier's reply to him is, "And for which one did you fight?"

Another depicts the Fuehrer as a butcher, cleaver in hand, leading a long line of pigs, which represent nations under his sway. The last one he seizes by the snout is Bulgaria.

Athenians have tangible proof of their army's accomplishment during the ten days of war against Germany. German prisoners have arrived here and are staying in barracks. Unlike the Italians, who are a familiar sight slouching through the streets on their way to captivity, the Germans goose-stepped.

While much of the world stands awed by German armed might, thus far fantastically successful, the following anecdote picked up from a wounded Greek soldier contains interest. The wounded soldier said he and a companion—both peasant boys—were together in a ravine somewhere in Thrace recently when they saw German infantry approaching. One Greek soldier said to the other, "What are we to do now? Here they come!" As he pointed to the invaders advancing, holding themselves stiff like ramrods.

The other said, "I don't know. The Italians always moved crouched. Maybe these aren't men. Maybe if we shoot our bullets would strike and have no effect, or they might go through and do nothing. You can't tell with such people."

At length it was decided that both would shoot. To their surprise the first volley felled two and the detachment fled.

This story is typical of what is going on, and now the myth that the invaders are Martians or invulnerable supermen is definitely cracked.

Capital Parade

Timetable Contracts

IN TIMES LIKE these, when all goes badly, Washington is commonly pervaded with an odd feeling of deadness and futility. There is a simple cause for this phenomenon. A really critical situation, such as that created by the Russo-Japanese pact and the recent events in the Mediterranean, can only be met with really big measures. Little measures, such as the departmental officials can prepare and take, are not good enough. Everything depends on the White House, and for this very reason the White House seems more than ever secluded and impenetrable, until the measures to be taken are finally revealed.

Behind the White House facade, however, activity is reported to be both intense and incessant at the moment. According to men who have the opportunity to judge, the President is no longer in the do-nothing mood which seized him in the weeks before his vacation. Moreover, probably because his vacation did not give him all the rest he hoped for, he seems at last to have steeled himself to letting routine matters be handled by others. Freed from the daily pressure of Governmental trivia, he is spending most of his time and energy on the major problems now confronting him and the country.

INTERPRETING the atmosphere of the White House is a little like auguring the future from the flight of birds. Yet it seems fairly safe to predict that the President's continuous concentration on major war problems means the bad news from abroad has shortened his timetable. Before the Russo-Japanese pact and the tragedy in the Mediterranean, no one who saw him doubted he would let public opinion mature a little longer before following the Lease-Lend Act with another big measure.

Now, judging both by the "feel" of the air and the opinions prevalent in White House circles, another big measure, or several at once, may be taken very soon.

This would be hardly worth reporting if the timetable of American action were not the most crucial factor in the war. For it is impossible to tell precisely what the big measures will be.

Take, for example, the problem which is now receiving far more of the President's time than any other—the problem of delivering safely American war materials in Britain and at the Mediterranean front. The British government has warned the President that unless this problem is solved, their resistance will be broken, by the most optimistic estimate, in nine months' time. Although reluctant to send convoys, the President is determined to discover a solution.

According to a member of the small group participating in the anxious deliberations on the subject, more than a dozen alternative methods are under consideration, involving every possible combination of air and naval protection for shipping and controlled shipping use. Being the man he is, and perhaps remembering his success in putting through the last war's North Sea mine blockade despite the doubts of the British Admiralty, the President is examining all the alternatives with an open mind. Thus it is clear that no one can predict exactly what will be done, but it is also clear that something is likely to be done soon.

Nor is this the only problem now before the President. Participation in economic warfare has been made much more likely by the Russo-Japanese pact, but the nature of our role must first be settled. Morale, propaganda abroad and volunteer home defense are also much to the fore. Action in all these fields may be anticipated before long.

ONE REASON for the current blankness of the White House facade despite the activity behind it is the extremely small number of people now working with the President. His chief assistant is Harry L. Hopkins, in whose White House bedroom questions of every kind and size are predigested for the President's consumption. Working with Hopkins, quietly but very influentially, is the small "central staff" previously mentioned in this space. The two former Treasury officials, Philip Young and Oscar Cox, and the War Department supply expert, Maj. Gen. James H. Burns, are still the most important members of the central staff. Some degree of coherence has been conferred on the staff, however, by Young's appointment as lease-lend bill administrator.

Then, besides this little, strictly White House group, there are the heads of the State, Treasury, War and Navy Departments, and a number of the British officials in Washington, among whom Arthur Purvis, head of the purchasing commission, is probably the most important. The joint strategy committee, composed of both British and American officers and civilians, which was also lately mentioned here, has been informally set up. This committee works with Hopkins. And finally, the President is in daily consultation with Winston Churchill.

In these arrangements there is a want of system, a certain amateurishness, which cannot help but be disconcerting. But the timetable is the important thing. If the signs are not deceptive in suggesting that the timetable of American action has been greatly contracted, then there is still ample room for hope.

Ante Pavelich

By Andre Visson

Croatian Quisling And Terrorist

THE FIRST CASUALTY of the current war was the Yugoslav King Alexander, assassinated on November 9, 1934, at Marseille. And the man who sent the killers to Marseille is Dr. Ante Pavelich, for whom Hitler and Mussolini had reserved the part of Croatian Quisling in the Yugoslav drama.

So, we must not be too surprised today, when the Axis and its satellites are brutally imposing their domination on the Balkans, to find together once more all these evil forces which seven years ago worked together preparing King Alexander's assassination.

ALEXANDER was assassinated by a Bulgaro-Macedonian terrorist, Vlada G. Chernozemsky. Chernozemsky's accomplices were Croatian terrorists, members of the Croat terrorist organization, Ustasha. Since the signing of the agreement of April 21, 1929, at Sofia, the Croat and Bulgar terrorists cooperated, sponsored by Italy and backed by Hungary.

Chernozemsky, known in the terroist circles under the surname of Vlada the Chauffeur, was the chauffeur of Mr. Vlkov, Bulgar Minister to Rome.

Chernozemsky and his accomplices, who had been trained in the terrorist camp of Janka-Pusta, Hungary, were sent to Marseille by Dr. Ante Pavelich, who since 1929 had been governing the Croat terrorist camp of Borgotaro, Italy. Dr. Ante Pavelich, who is today the "gauleiter" of the "Independent State of Croatia," was the chief organizer of the Marseille murders. And Slavko Kvaternik, one of his chifetains, who is today the commander in chief of the Croatian army, which in plain English means assistant chief of the Gestapo, acting in Croatia, fled France after Marseille's crime to Germany, where he had established his headquarters since the Nazis came to power.

But if, officially, Ante Pavelich and Slavko Kvaternik were, with Gustav Perchetz and other Croat terrorists, the principal organizers of the Marseille murders, there were others behind the scenes who financed these men and helped them realize their plans.

THE MORAL SPONSORSHIP, the financial help and the protection of administration given then to the Croat terrorists by Italian and Hungarian authorities were a public secret. It was known in all European capitals that Signor Flavio Suvich, while he had been the undersecretary of Italian foreign office, had put great hopes on the Croat terrorist action in destroying Yugoslavia from within and that he was in permanent contact with Pavelich.

But who exactly are these Croat terrorists, Ante Pavelich and Slavko Kvaternik, who reappear today on the tragic European stage under the sponsorship of Germany and Italy?

Among the stooges Hitler managed to find in all occupied countries—with the exception of Poland—Pavelich and his assistants are, perhaps, the most repugnant.

Ante Pavelich was born 48 years ago in the home of a Croat peasant in the Lika Province. Lika is one of the most romantic but also one of the most poverty-stricken districts of Croatia. Its peasants have to leave it in order to make a living, and many Croat immigrants in the United States are from Lika. Lika's peasants have, moreover, been for centuries traditional rebels against any authority and were often leaving their native villages, fleeing to the neighboring mountains, where they fought the gendarmes and the soldiers. These rebels called themselves Ustashi.

PAVELICH studied law at the Universities of Zagreb and Vienna and served in the Austrian army during World War I. After the war he joined circles of Croatian intelligentsia who were particularly disillusioned by the war, by its aftermath, and who felt embittered against everybody.

The Croat peasants, who constitute 90 per cent of the Croatian population, managed to maintain during the centuries of foreign rule their national individuality. And their leaders, from Bishop Strossmayer down to Stepan Radich and Wladimir Machek, guided them on the way to union with the Serbs and the Slovenes.

Part of Croat intelligentsia, however, lost contact with the people and adopted the German "Weltanschaung." These Croat intellectuals suffered from an inferiority complex, as they considered the Germans, and even the Magyars, their superiors. On the other hand, they hated the Serbs, who, less civilized than the Croats, became after World War I leaders of Yugoslavia. They hated Western democracies who helped the Serbs to create this Yugoslavia. They hated the Jews, who had taken a very important part in Croatia's trade and liberal professions. They despised their own peasants and they hated the leaders of these peasants for having concluded an agreement with the Serbs and the Slovenes.

The leader of this embittered and degenerated Croat intelligentsia was Ante Starchevich, who under the Austrian regime invented a theory according to which all the Slavs were of Croat descent. The Serbs, according to Starchevich, were merley Croats who had adopted the Greek Orthodox creed.

ANOTHER PROMINENT member of these Croatian circles, a priest, Cherubin Segvich, invented quite a different theory. He said the Croats were not even Slavs—they were Goths who had adopted the language of their inferior eastern neighbors.

These fantastic and contradictory theories flattered the Croat intellectuals, who felt they could not obtain on a social and national scale that which they were entitled to.

In 1929 when King Alexander established a dictatorship in order to save Yugoslavia's unity, Pavelich fled abroad, first to Vienna and then to Italy. It was in Italy that he founded, with Italian support, the Ustasha terroist organization and directed its action against Yugoslavia. Between 1929 and 1934 this organization perpetrated 21 murders in Yugoslavia and tried in 1931 to raise up the Lika peasants against the Belgrade government.

During all these years Dr. Vladimir Machek and all other Croat peasant leaders, while fighting the Belgrade government in order to obtain autonomy for Croatia, were constantly condemning the separatist and terroristic action of Ante Pavelich and his chieftains, who were openly serving foreign interests.

AT EASTER, 1937, when Prince Paul, pursuing his policy of appeasement, accepted Mussolini's proposal to sign a nonaggression and friendship pact with Italy, one of the secret clauses of this pact provided for the extradition by Italy of all Croat terrorists. Pavelich and his chief accomplices remained, however, in Italy. It seems that the Rome government insisted on an exception in their favor.

Today Pavelich and Kvaternik have returned to Croatia, both pushed and protected by German and Italian rifles. They will hardly find as their supporters more than 5 or 6 per cent among the Croats. And it appears that among the 650,000 Croats living in the United States hardly more than 65,000 or 75,000 can be described as sympathizers with Pavelich's totalitarian and pro-Axis regime. But so long as the Gestapo, reinforced by the Axis' tanks and planes, reigns over Croatia, Pavelich, the Croatian Quisling, who since 1929 had openly served first Italy and then the Axis, will continue to serve his foreign masters, who paid him well during all these years and who saved him from the death penalty in 1934.

Hold them flashes from Belgrade!
I am off the Ziri Valley,
Tell me not of any raid!
Prilep, Galikos and Klikis—
Tell me later of 'em all,
For just now I'm concentratin'
On that grand old yell, "Play ball!"

What was that about Bengazi?
Sidi Omar? . . . Oh, the southpaw!
Well, I hear the guy can twirl;
Subotica, Sambor, Dardo,
Eszek, Brod and Drin and Czay . . .
Well, I read about them fellers
Ah, I'm hot to see 'em play.

Hold the news that comes from Drava,
Skip the tidings from Tobruk,
Malta, Bari and Taranto—
They are places I would duck.
Huh? Lou say Suez is threatened—
Where's he playin', and who for?
Serbs and Nazis in big battle? . . .
Yeh, but, mister, what's the score?

We can talk of Libya later,
And about them Dardanelles;
Mount Olympus ain't in my league:
Lemme hear them bleacher yells.
We've got Greenland, so you tell me;
Well, each day there's sumpin' new;
All I hope is if we've got him
We will keep Hank Greenberg, too.

Yeh, I've heard about the Balkans,
And it sure is pretty tough;
But lay off 'em for a minute,
For I want more cheerful stuff;
Nish, Szeged, Petrich and Juma—
They can wait a while, I sez;
What of Ripple, Dean and Feller,
Hubbell, Mungo and Gomez?

Old Gibraltar? Sure it's vital,
But it seems so far away;
You've got news from where? Ankara?
What position does he play?
"Eire Asked to Give Three Bases" . . .
That's a headline more my style . . .
But I hate that kind of pitchin'—
Let 'em sock that ball a mile!

Iraq? Say, what club is he with?
Matsuoka? Who is he?
I keep up with winter league stuff
But them two is new to me;
Luftwaffe? Panzers? Coup and Blitzkrieg?
"Take 'em out!" is what I bawl;
Axis? Parley? Drive? Siege? Pincers? . . .
Ah, they're bushers, one and all!

Hitler, so the story runs, celebrated Easter by putting poisonous dyes on eggs for the kiddies and setting fire to greenhouses full of lilies.

"The appearance of enemy air raiders dropping pamphlets over Boston or New York might be the signal for sabotage and an attempt to take over local governments. In the exuberant security of a Manhattan cocktail party this idea gets a great laugh. But such a flight is not impossible. It takes only six or eight determined, armed men to seize a radio station here and another gang to put a power plant or a tunnel or subway out of commission there."—Col. J. A. BAEAR in the New York Times.

The average American won't wake up until a bomb drops near him from the skies, at which time his squawk, "Why wasn't I warned?" will be heard around the world.

Jay Wallace says that today America marches to the tune of "The Stars and Strikes Forever."

President Roosevelt threw out the first ball in the opening of the baseball season at Washington, using what appeared to be the all-out motion.

King Cole won the opening feature at the Jamaica races and, as Elmer Twitchell who backed him at those low odds put it, "He called for his pipe, he called for his bowl and he called for his fiddlers, three-sixty, two-fifty and two-thirty."

In High Spirits

President And The Press Conference

SOMETHING in the circumstances caused this press conference to be one which President Roosevelt enjoyed throughout—and "throughout" meant an unusual length, 40 minutes. The number of newspapermen present was large, and they happened to be of a mood to enjoy Mr. Roosevelt's sallies, quips and quiddities—there were times when the President's stenographer, if he chose, could truthfully have inserted in his notes, "loud laughter." The newspapermen included some from out of town to whom the event was a highly appreciated novelty—among them a New York columnist—commentator on the affairs of Broadway, Hollywood, the drama and associated subjects—to whom Mr. Roosevelt, in the course of the conference, paid a delicately graceful attention.

SULLIVAN

BEGINNING, the President said he had saved for us a detail of the business passing over his desk—it was an item in the first list of supplies asked for by the British under the lease-lend bill. Before telling us what this item of supplies was, the President, with a story-teller's instinct for suspense, recited the background. He recalled that months ago, when he was explaining to us why America should give the British materials rather than money, he had illustrated by a parable. He had told us that when your neighbor's house is burning down, and your own house is thereby in danger, you don't go over and give your neighbor $100; you go down in your cellar and get the garden hose and lend that to him. This parable, the President had used last January. And now came denouement, convincing proof of the President's wisdom. On the first list of supplies, set down by the British as their greatest needs, was 900,000 feet of hose!

Mr. Roosevelt's pleasure over this proof of his prescience was marred a little by one of the newspapermen. This too unromantic individual asked a realistic question, "Mr. President, have you any ocean-going fire hose?"

THAT QUESTION was meant, by allegory, to bring up the subject of use of our naval power to protect British cargo ships carrying supplies from us; in short, the question of convoy. This is a subject which Mr. Roosevelt does not like. Whenever it was brought up in this press conference, as it was in several forms, Mr. Roosevelt bridled. On this subject, he said there has been more nonsense, more printer's ink wasted, more oratory by people who don't know a hill of beans about it, than on any other subject in modern times. Having thus designated comprehensive ignorance as the state of others who speak on the subject, Mr. Roosevelt reassured us by saying that he knows something about the subject. While we were reassured by this, we were not enlightened in detail, for Mr. Roosevelt said he did not care to discuss the subject.

From this momentary interlude of irritation, Mr. Roosevelt was brought back to his high enjoyment of the occasion by one who asked whether he was going to take a scheduled trip to Warm Springs, Ga. Mr. Roosevelt, with the agreeable manner of a man who has incubated a good wisecrack, replied that he was afraid someone would ask him that—the story might be broken by Walter Winchell (who was present). So, Mr. Roosevelt would tell it himself. There was at Warm Springs, he explained, an outbreak of German measles. That did not faze Mr. Roosevelt, he had had German measles long ago, and did not know whether you can catch it a second time. But he was deterred by reflecting how it would sound, in the present state of the world, if it were announced that the President of the United States had German measles.

FROM THE newspapermen came some questions about strikes, one of them a direct query to the President: "Did you have something to do with bringing that [steel] agreement about?" Mr. Roosevelt replied that he had nothing to do with it. But some felt, possibly incorrectly, that his manner was that of a lady who, with coy archness, says no, but subtly implies yes.

There was a wisecrack, really a rather good one, about dollar-a-year men. All these—so Mr. Roosevelt had learned in a humorous exchange with OPM Director Knudsen—were Republicans, except a boy who had just graduated from Yale last year and had not yet voted. Democrats, it was inferred, do not have enough money to be dollar-a-year men.

There was a question about changing the ages of the draft, to which Mr. Roosevelt replied that the idea is being discussed—it would be a good thing, he said, and repeated several times, for every young man to give a year of his life to the Government.

There was a question about the powers of Mr. Harry Hopkins in his new role as head of certain activities under the lease-lend bill. This question Mr. Roosevelt did not like, especially deploring the word "powers;" he implied that Mr. Hopkins would just do any tasks assigned him.

THE CONFERENCE closed with an erudite and detailed dissertation by Mr. Roosevelt concerning our action about Greenland, its history, its status under international law and the Monroe Doctrine, its ethnological make-up, climate, hemispheric status.

'Speed Air Defense, Or Face Bombing,' Turner Warns U. S.

Indianapolis, April 16 (AP).—Col. Roscoe Turner, famed speed flier, said today that "if our defense efforts isn't speeded up, the German air force will be able to blow down all the cities of our Eastern seaboard."

Turner, speaking at a convention of the Indiana Restaurant Association, advocated consolidation of the Army and Navy air forces into a separate command.

"It's an open secret in the industry," he said, "that new warplanes are being flown across the continent and then the propellers have to be taken off and shipped back to the factories on the West Coast to be fastened on the next batch of planes.

"We won't get away from this sort of bottleneck until our aviation preparedness program is directed by aviation people."

American U. Students Pick a Garlic Queen

JOANNE HEITMANN, GARLIC QUEEN THE FIRST, WITH REGAL BOUQUET

Two hundred dirt-smeared students equipped with rakes, hoes, hot dogs, second-hand work gloves and endless energy yesterday gave American University a major face-lifting and then proceeded to elect America's first "garlic queen."

They raked leaves, repaired campus bridges, fixed roads and planted trees from 9 a. m. until noon. Leaving no leaf unraked, they covered the campus from Hurst Hall to Hamilton House. They took special pains in manicuring the lawn and garden at the president's house, in preparation for President Paul Douglass' arrival next month.

Even more energetically, they gathered in small, food-minded groups at noon and descended en masse on a heap of hot dogs and sandwiches in the gym. Twenty minutes later, not a hot dog remained.

Solemnly and with the serious air befitting all auspicious occasions, they then held an election. Purpose: To choose a "garlic queen."

Girl Scouts Ready Camp For Summer

Ideal camping weather yesterday attracted more than 100 Girl Scouts from Washington and nearby Maryland to Rockwood Manor Camp, off Conduit Road, 5 miles beyond Cabin John Bridge.

Older girls prepared the camp for summer use, cleared the site of last year's leaves, cut fallen branches into kindling.

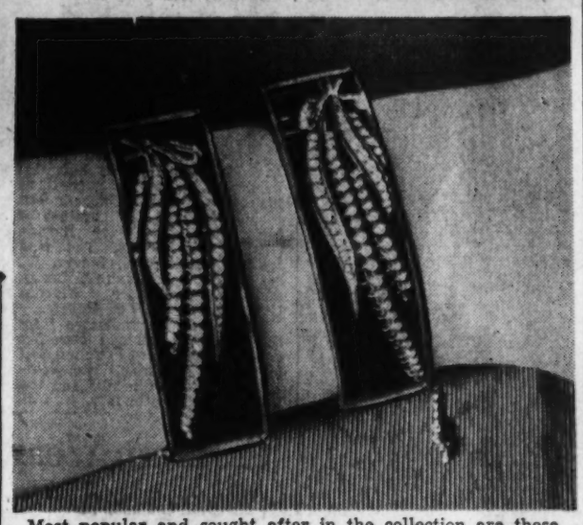
Bracelets, Which Once Enslaved, Now Give Allure

The rule of "safety in numbers" is a good one to follow in selecting the number of bracelets to wear. Sabine, whose collection of heritage jewels is at a local store this week, approves of wearing five small bracelets on one arm as a means of concentrating eye appeal. The old Bohemian garnet bracelets (above) shown in massed effect, are worn equally well by blonde or brunette

There is a feeling of ancient slavery about this silver incrusted cuff bracelet from Persia. Studded with turquoise and garnets it is pliable enough to conform to the wrist size



Most popular and sought after in the collection are these twin 18-carat gold, black enamel bracelets. They are decorated in a lily-of-the-valley design of raised pearls. Instead of wearing one on each arm, they are worn together to give a symmetrical balance

Bold, Startling Effects on Arm Preferred by Modern Woman

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

THERE must be a bit of the ancient overlord in the modern American male because men still get a thrill out of seeing bracelets on women—and bracelets were originally the sign of feminine slavery. At least this is the opinion of Sabine, who is showing her exquisite collection of heritage jewels at a local store this week.

Sabine, nee Sabine Medias in true classic Latin style, is in private life Mrs. Joseph Brumbergh, wife of a Buffalo physician. She was born into an interest in jewels through her father's personal collection. Later she became versed in the history of precious jewels through foreign studies of peoples and their native handicraft.

Although collecting rare jewels is now a business with Sabine, she formerly led a very domestic life. She felt, however, that she should do something about the fact that one could not find antique jewelry in the stores. She sought pieces she couldn't find, and thought that probably other women, too, were seeking the same kind of jewels.

Sabine has included in her collection of heritage jewels, items that can only be "picked up" in strange places. Her collection includes both antique jewels and those that are worthy of being kept and inherited.

First Worn by Slaves

Especially interesting in the display are Sabine's unusual bracelets. She has every type and shape from those of early Persia to delicate filigree worked bracelets from Russia.

According to Sabine, bracelets were first worn by slaves in ancient countries as a mark of ownership. They were also the insignia of kings in ancient Hebrew days. Sometimes they were worn purely as decoration—but mostly to denote ownership of a slave or the married state of a woman.

Worn by women, bracelets showed the husband's rank or importance and his pride in possession. Sometimes they were riveted right on a woman's arm. If she escaped, she did not go far!

Sabine points out that virtually every woman can wear one bracelet or more if she knows the kind and type to choose. It is really the rule of cause and effect that she governs her choice by.

"Today the trend is toward the more asymmetrical and startling effects, rather than the symmetrical appearance of twin bracelets," she said. Sabine likes to emphasize a particular effect with several bracelets on one arm. "Four or six dainty small ones worn in quantity with a tiny unobtrusive one on the other arm to relelve the bare starkness, is very effective," she said. "Double effect is achieved by concentrating the attention and the eye is not distracted."

Large Jewelry for Small Women

In defense of the small woman, Sabine said that she can wear large pieces of jewelry sometimes with more success than the large woman. "Some large women like to wear small dainty jewelry, which is perfectly natural," she said. "They can't wear a small brooch, however, but a small ring would look correct."

Sabine gave some simple rules to govern the selection of jewelry in general, which are also applicable to the wearing of bracelets. "Small women can wear more massive and elaborate jewelry than larger woman. The latter has two choices—either she should wear plain surface jewelry in proportion to her size or else she may wear the smaller pieces that are daintier and more exquisite," she said.

As a final hint, Sabine suggests a woman should wear bracelets with a variation in design and metal, only if she wears jewelry with a flare. If a woman is not the exotic and forceful type, she should choose the "sweeter" type of jewelry.

Normal Lipline Back in Style

Lips and nails are a part of any woman's costume. Those accents do as much to mark her as a well dressed person as the correct hat. If her lips and nails match to begin with, and if she has chosen the right shade, then she will be off for a well-groomed start.

Due to a revolt on the part of men, the sprawling bow mouth is disappearing and the more normal lipline has returned. In using a dark lipstick be sure to rouge well inside the lips, or the inner lips will look pallid. And remember a slight fluff of powder over the lipstick will set it beautifully.

Efficient House Is Operated From Desk

By Elizabeth MacRea Boykin

TRYING TO RUN a house without a desk is just as difficult as trying to run an office without a desk. That's where the mechanics of many households break down—they're run out of somebody's head—but no matter how pretty or capable that head, it's just not good business. Running a house and family is a business proposition, make no mistake about that. As such, it demands careful planning on paper, a well-organized schedule, conscientious bookkeeping, a reasonable budget and all the other things that make the wheels of a business go around.

Oh, we know that many an old hand at housekeeping will leer, just as old-fashioned grandmamas used to pish-tosh that modern talk about raising babies by the book. Till they discover how much healthier, happier and less trouble were babies raised that way. Eventually, the scoffers will wake up to the fact that housekeeping is also a pleasanter, smoother job when it is done from a desk.

Most any desk is better than none, but to do a proper job requires a desk with space to work, space to file away things and, preferably, a place for a portable typewriter. Present brides have, many of them, experience in operating an efficient desk and know how to keep their affairs in shipshape order. Keeping books shouldn't be made into a chore—grocery orders and prices can be kept in the same notebook used to jot down the list. Records of bills and such like can be kept in the checkbook—which for desk use should be the large size with three checks to the page.

Business and club letters should be written on the typewriter with carbon copies. Save all the carbons till transactions are completed and then throw away those not needed for permanent record or reference. Keep a large page desk calendar to jot down all activities, appointments, plans. Keep plenty of sharpened pencils, fresh pen points, ink, blotters, clips, rubber bands, paper and carbon paper on hand. A good pencil sharpener, a bottle of glue, a pair of desk scissors, a letter opener, a stamp box, an embosser with your address, a desk clock, a typewriter—these are necessaries. Consider yourself and your work important enough to warrant proper equipment and supplies.

Until you've really gotten your household organized and operating from your desk—you won't realize how much time you will save and how much more interesting will be the work you do. So please, lady fair, trip right down and pick yourself a good desk, equip it and use it. The stores have excellent selections of handsome yet practical desks in period designs to fit into whatever style of home you have. In fact, a desk can be the most distinguished piece of furniture in the room—or even a focal point for your decorative plan.

Improve Your Singing Voice By Home Study

NEARLY everyone is born with the equipment to be a singer! And there's no reason why you shouldn't use yours. Teach yourself, know what fun it is to win admiration at parties, to have people begging you to sing.

Of course, like most people you may have neglected parts of the body used in singing particularly those parts we've diagrammed.

As a baby you breathed deeply from your diaphragm, filling your lungs to capacity. You could cry for hours. And that's just the way you have to breathe to be a singer.

To give your singing richness of tone, learn to use your reasonators, tiny cavities in your head. Practice projecting your voice toward a wall or corner of the room calling "Yoo-hoo." Soon you'll feel a vibration in your head, the resonators are working.

Next close your lips and hum until the vibration returns; then sing softly a phrase of music.

Our 24-page instruction book, "Wake Up and Sing," gives complete exercises for developing resonance, range and beauty of tone. Explains elements of music. Includes four songs for practice, advises on a singing career.

Send 15 cents in coins for our instruction book, "Wake Up and Sing," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of instruction book.

Overweight Always a Sure Sign Too Much Food Is Consumed

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE is never any question as to whether or not you overeat. If you are overweight, you do. Every excess pound means an additional 4,320 calories—and the scales give you away.

The argument that you do not eat very much may be perfectly valid. It may be that you have such an economical metabolism you can't use many calories. If you have an easy-going disposition, are built for comfort rather than speed, and take slight exercise, you probably do not burn more than 16 calories per pound of normal body weight. Let's say your normal weight is 130 pounds. Multiply that figure by 16 and the answer is 2,080 calories—all you can use in a day.

An active person may stay nice and slim on the same amount of food that causes you to store pounds. While you wait for transportation, she dashes up the stairs, sprints up the escalators, or walks several blocks because she can beat the bus. Anyone that energetic can esily burn 20 calories per pound, compared with your 16.

Factors to Consider

Weight and structure must also be given their due in calculating your requirements. The greater the proportion of active tissue (muscle and glands), the more calories you burn; the higher the percentage of fatty tissue for total weight, the fewer calories you use. Once you understand that fat is just "dead" weight, you begin to realize what you are up against. If you are short and plump, you may burn one-third less calories than a tal thin person weighing the same.

We'll assume your appetite is bigger than requirements and that you tip the scales at 150 pounds instead of the normal 130. You have 20 pounds to be turned back into energy. This you can do at a steady rate by clipping from 500 to 1,000 calories off your daily menus.

On a restricted allowance of 1,080 calories per day you can burn up a good two pounds of fat per week. If you are a bit short on will power, allow yourself 1,580 calories daily and lose a pound a week. That number is so liberal you'll scarcely know you're dieting.

Cut Down on the Fats

The best trick is to do your calorie cutting in the form of the high calorie foods. Fats count two and one-fourth times as many calories as protein or carbohydrates. An ounce of sugar yields 113 calories, an ounce of protein 113 calories, an ounce of butter 218 calories. It pays to restrict the cream and butter and to leave off the gravy, mayonnaise French dressing and pastry.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Spinster, 36, Has Suffered Lifelong Fear of Men; Crosses Street, Like Adolescent Girl, to Avoid Meeting Them; Is There Remedy for This Quirk?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman, 36 years of age, and all my life I have suffered from a fear of the opposite sex. I have tried continually, but unsuccessfully, to conquer this affliction. I am still considered attractive and young looking, but I become so uncomfortable in the company of men that they soon drop me. Even when I meet, on the street, men with whom I have worked for years, my voice fails me and I grow tense and self-conscious, which causes them to avoid me.

Sometimes, in order to ward off these awkward meetings, I cross the street, like an adolescent girl. Oddly enough, I am not always so ill at ease, and I am sure my variable behavior makes me appear even more peculiar. Isn't there some remedy for this mental quirk? And do you think there is still hope for a spinster of 36? L. T. S.

DEAR L. T. S.: Your so-called "fear of the opposite sex" amounts, really, to an acute manifestation of self-distrust in relation to men. You are not at ease with men because you suffer from the wretched conviction that you haven't the foggiest idea how to win their approval. And this wretched conviction takes on nightmare import for the reason, I daresay, that you are a woman of potentially very intense emotions,—who has needed the emotional outlets of reciprocal romantic love, marriage, motherhood, etc., rather more than the average woman.

I should guess that you are, on the one hand, instinctively and powerfully attracted to men; and yet, on the other hand, almost paralytically inhibited in your social reactions to them—for the reason, no doubt, that you were schooled in the Victorian tradition that no nice girl either feels or displays any interest in the opposite sex; and awaken (if ever) to a recognition of man's existence on the social scene, only after some Prince Charming has stormed her castle, without any encouragement whatsoever, proposed marriage, (to which she replies, "This is so sudden!") and finally carried her off to "a home of their own," amidst general rejoicing. Then, of course (according to the curriculum by which you were taught), it is quite all right for a woman to come alive and be candidly and indulgently interested in the "opposite sex."

Neurotic shyness such as yours is a "vicious circle" sort of ailment. Unfortunately, it cuts you off from the one sure cure for the affliction,—which is, a sentimental alliance with a man. And it is problematic whether the "vicious circle" can be (shall we say?) intellectually interfered with, sufficiently to permit you to engage some man's exclusive attention, for the period necessary to establish your confidence in your feminine appeal, and to acquaint you with the genial and lovable quality of masculine nature.

However, it is healthful and sensible to make an intelligent effort in that direction. Probably the first thing you should do is "read up" on the subject of wholesome emotional relationships and social attitudes between men and women. Floyd Dell's "Love in the Machine Age" and Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human," are two books which—whether casually dipped into or carefully studied—ought to give you almost miraculous emancipation from many of the inhibitions which have been freezing your face and cracking your voice, into caricature proportions, in all your encounters with the opposite sex.

The next thing to do (if you are not already doing it), is to act on every lovely woman's motto that, "Loveliness begins with an inner conviction of loveliness,"—and lavish upon yourself the daily creature care that will give you a continuous feeling of immaculate, exquisitely scented, glowing well being. And, also, to dress so becomingly and with such nicety that you feel no need, ever, to shrink from the most minutely appraising eye.

Thirdly (and simultaneously), take bold issue with your shyness by making it a rule, in every encounter with a man, to act in accordance with the maxim, "He who would have friends must show himself friendly." I suspect that the men are not so much repelled by the effects of your shyness upon your personality, as they are daunted by the effect of that shyness has upon themselves. By your inarticulacy, you put them in the position of giving a very bad account of themselves, and they just don't like being made to feel gauche or stupid or tedious. So snap out of your fantastic self-engrossment and give them a break, by responding sympathetically, cordially and appreciatively to their polite overtures.

You ask, "Is there hope for a spinster of 36?" It is axiomatic that, "While there is life, there is hope." And it isn't your age, so much as it is your state of mind, that is responsible for your current unloved and lonely social status. M. H.

Interesting Guests Abound at Vogel Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

"THERE'S ONE THING about a crisis like this—an international crisis, I mean. It gives you a new standard of values."

Above the buzz of voices at the party given by Mrs. Martin Vogel and Mrs. Effingham Townsend yesterday afternoon I listened intently. For the speaker was pocket-sized Peggy Lane, daughter of the United States Minister to Yugoslavia and Mrs. Arthur Bliss Lane. In her own words, she has "gone through hell the past ten days." She has heard that the United States Legation at Belgrade has been burned. She can't tell you exactly where her parents are now. "But if they're safe, nothing matters," she went on. "For a time I wondered what would happen to some of the photographs I had made and left there in my choice collection; but now, no personal possession makes any difference at all. War, you know, reshuffles your sense of values."

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

It was merely a conversation-in-passing at a very pleasant party. Before 7 o'clock rolled around I had talked to no end of other interesting persons. But attractive Peggy Lane . . . and what she had said . . . lingered in my mind. And, despite the hub-bub of usual small talk that accents any teatime gathering, I was wondering if "values" for all of us aren't going through a very definite state of being reshuffled.

Well, to go back to the party itself. It was, as you probably know, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Vogel, jr., whose marriage a few weeks ago was one of Washington society's outstanding surprises of the season. The guests of honor and the two hostesses received in the small room just off the drawing room, and I must say the quartet was a handsome one. Mrs. Vogel, in whose Kalorama Road home the party was given, was trimly turned out in a floor-length gown of black and white, set off with a shoulder corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Townsend wore a smart blue and white ensemble, and the new Mrs. Vogel looked like a fashion picture in a powder blue dress, made with a tiered plaited apron and accented with a corsage of orchids. Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, who make their home with Mrs. Vogel, were not in the receiving line, but they mingled in the crowd, seeing that everybody met everybody else, and had a good time. Baroness Stackelberg wore a two-piece frock, featuring a dainty pattern of white on a black background—very becoming.

A TEA-TABLE in full array dominated the dining room; but most of the guests collected in the spacious drawing room, where a bar was set up and where most of the guests stayed on . . . well past the closing hour.

"Oh, I've listened to you so often . . . on the radio," gurgled one dowager after another, after being presented to one of the guests—a Mr. Godwin. But he turn out not to be Earl Godwin, but rather Neville Godwin, of the British Embassy, who was accompanied by his wife and spent most of the afternoon explaining who he was not.

Practically all the party-going contingent of Washington society—young and old—turned out for the fete. The Vogel home was a moving mass of Capitalites for well over two hours. Telling who was not present would be a much easier task. But, if you would have names—well, here goes:

Among those arriving early were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, who was a popular center of attention; Mrs. Neville Butler, of the British Embassy, who couldn't take a step without being completely surrounded; Mrs. Sydney Cloman, who arrived with her niece, Mrs. Natalie Keeney Phillips; Pendleton Hogan, who squired one charming lady after another through the crowd—I saw him first with Betty Beale, then with Jacquelin Meredith, and when I last spotted him he was chatting with still another lovely young thing.

COUNTESS LASOCKA was among those arriving early, as were Mrs. McCeney Werlich and her brother, Robert Hinckely. Mrs. Carlton Holdrege was seen in the throng; also, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler, arriving with the former's mother, Mrs. Carlos del Mar; the Swedish Military Attache and Mme. Wessel, Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Mason and Lady Broderick.

Who else did I see? Well, there were Miss Dolly Corbin, Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Arthur Bradley Campbell, chatting with Clarence Hewes; Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Miss Alice Barry and Miss Mary Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem were among those present; also, Mrs. Randolph H. Miner, who was one of the belles of the afternoon; Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould and Miss Eleanor Meem, who arrived with Jock Merriam, of course.

Still others there—to mention but a few I saw—were Miss Josephine Patten, Mrs. Bissett Norment, George Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Downs, Mrs. William T. Mann, Edward Van Deventer, Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, in an attractive blue and white ensemble; Baroness Von Seidler, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman and the Misses Laura and Ruth Tuckerman, Lady Latham and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson and many, many more.

CAPITAL CALENDAR: Arriving in town yesterday to be the guests of Mrs. Arthur Fowler were Col. and Mrs. Jacques Balsan (she was the Duchess of Marlborough), who are en route to New York after spending some time in Palm Beach. Mrs. Fowler entertained at dinner last evening for the Balsans, and she will be hostess at another dinner in their honor on Friday evening. Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis will have a dinner for the visitors this evening, and Henry May will fete them at luncheon today. They will be off for New York on Saturday . . . Mrs. Fowler, incidentally, who has spent most of the season in the house she leased from Mrs. Harold Walker, will move May 1 to Georgetown—the home now occupied by Countess di Zoppola.

Thai Minister Gives Dinner

One of the few "white tie" dinners of the Washington season was that given last evening by the Minister of Thailand and Mme. Seni Pramoj. Most gatherings of diplomats have been "black tie" since the war began.

Among the guests last night was Miss Chira Khittamuntka, daughter of the foreign minister of Thailand. She is studying at Goucher College in Baltimore. The company also included the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Vera Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, Luang Bhakdi, Second Secretary of the Legation, and the Secretary and Mme. Chintakananda.

Also hosts at dinner last night were the Librarian of Congress and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, who later took their guests to the Anderson House for the Picadilly Arcade. In their party were Gen. and Mrs. Edwin Watson, Stanley Woodward, John Foster, Edward Pritchard and Richard Meyer, of New York, in whose honor the affair was held. Mr. Meyer was principal auctioneer later in the evening.

Resumes 'At Homes'

Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet, who discontinued her "at homes" because of illness, will resume these pleasant weekly gatherings on Sunday afternoon at 6 o'clock.

MRS. JOSEPH WILLIAM MAGEE

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Magee will live in Arlington.

Mrs. Magee attended the University of California, at Los Angeles, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi. Mr. Magee received his B.S. and M.A. from the University of Mississippi and his Ph.D. from the University of Texas.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

BRAZIL'S No. 1 United States woman fan is Senhora Amaral Peixoto, daughter of President Vargas, of Brazil. She spent a year here when Oswaldo Aranha, now Foreign Minister, was the Brazilian Ambassador, and with her husband is back again, though they will be here only a week. She is enthusiastic about all things American and speaks fluent English.

The most ardent American feminist would be impressed by Senhora Peixoto. She is a graduate of the University of Brazil and received a law degree there, though she has never practiced. When an attempt was made to seize her father's palace, in an uprising in Rio several years ago, Senhora Peixoto grabbed a gun and waited nonchalantly to use it if necessary. Fortunately the occasion didn't arise.

Commander Peixoto is an officer in the Brazilian navy and also Governor of the State of Rio de Janeiro. His father-in-law has been president since 1930—two years longer than Mr. Roosevelt.

Yesterday the Peixotos had a whole 12 hours free for sightseeing, but today a staggering schedule of parties in their honor begins. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller will be hosts at cocktails at their home on Foxhall Road and the Brazilian Ambassador and Senhora de Martins will give a dinner. The visitors will begin the day with a call at the Pan American Union at 11 this morning. Tomorrow night the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. A. A. Berle will be hosts at dinner for Commander and Senhora Peixoto, and the next day, Saturday, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Welles will give them a luncheon. That afternoon the Naval Attache and Senhora Valle will have a cocktail party and the Counselor of the Embassy and Senhora Konder will be hosts at dinner in the evening. On Sunday the couple will dine with the Embassy Secretary and Senhora Gouthier and on Monday afternoon they will go to the Wardman Park for tea with Mrs. Cordell Hull.

The Brazilians will spend a few days in New York before making another tour of the United States, probably by plane. They spent their honeymoon here after their marriage a year or so ago. Senhora Peixoto christened the new liner, Rio de Janeiro, at Chester, Pa., last week.

ANOTHER in the procession of Americans coming to Washington to report on England is Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University. He returned earlier in the week on the Clipper after two months in London as head of the three-man mission sent by President Roosevelt to study recent English scientific research and experience. He is keeping his findings to himself until he sees authorities in the Capital.

Another Clipper passenger, but just from Bermuda, was "Chip" Robert. He is one of the engineers in charge of the construction of United States naval and air bases in Bermuda.

LADY HALIFAX mingled a luncheon with the strictly social Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and a tour of New York housing developments during her recent stay in Manhattan. On her inspection of the Red Hook housing project in Brooklyn she paid a surprise visit to one of the tenants. Lady Halifax also inspected the headquarters of Bundles for Britain. In England the Ambassador's wife took an active part in social welfare and said she was particularly impressed by the New York housing developments.

Mrs. Harry Fulton Will Entertain For D. A. R. Official

Mrs. Harry R. Fulton will entertain at a luncheon today at the Cosmos Club. Honor guests will be Mrs. Val Taylor, vice president general of the U. S. D. A. R., and Mrs. D. W. Houston, of Aberdeen, Miss. Mrs. Houston is the guest here of her brother and sister-in-law, Judge and Mrs. E. O. Sykes. Mrs. Sykes also will attend the luntheon, as will Mrs. Armelia Fair, who is a sister of Mrs. Houston.

Others in the company will be Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. Zebulon Judd, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, Mrs. J. Wesley Buchanan, Mrs. B. Y. Martin, Mrs. Thomas Hardy Seay, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Hanan Gardner, Miss Lillian Chenoweth, Mrs. L. E. Mayfield and Mrs. A. S. Mitchell, of Mobile, Ala. Also in the party will be the hostess' daughter, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, Mrs. Wesley Evans Buchanan, Miss Emma Brown, of Uniontown, Ala., and Miss Catherine Strong.

Ticket Groups For Chinese Aid Benefit Named

The prominent Washington women working for the success of the benefit to be held April 27 at Constitution Hall for United Chinese Relief have divided themselves into various ticket committees to see that the Capital is thoroughly covered.

Mrs. Millard Tydings heads the senatorial group and Mrs. Laurance Arnold, wife of Representative Arnold, is presiding over the House contingent. Others are Tomas Cajigas, Latin Americans; Mrs. Philip Evans, Friends of Honolulu, and Mrs. Lennings Sweet, who is in charge of selling tickets in Fairfax County.

Mrs. William B. Sims, jr., is vice chairman of the ticket committee. Other members are Mrs. Oscar Badger, Mrs. John Bailey, Mrs. Kent Ball, Mrs. John Jouett, Miss Emily Mackall, Mrs. William Offutt, Mrs. Frederick Perry, Mrs. Burks Summers, Miss Nell Tyson, Mrs. Edward Wailes, Mrs. Jared Wood and Mrs. J. M. Woodard.

Former Ambassador William C. Bullitt will speak at the benefit and Mischa Elman, famous violinist, will play. Another feature will be the movie, "Bombing of Chunking."

Two Parties Given Couple

Chalk up two more parties in the series of pre-wedding fetes being given for Miss Stellita Stapleton and George Renchard. Last night Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Clark—he will be an usher at their wedding on Saturday—were hosts at a dinner. Another usher, Hamilton Robinson, gave a cocktail party yesterday afternoon.

Out-of-town guests are beginning to pour in from several cities for the wedding. Miss Stapleton has taken over the Sulgrave Club to house them. Mr. and Mrs. George William Renchard, of Detroit, parents of the bridegroom-to-be, arrived yesterday for the festivities.

Mr. Robinson, yesterday's host at cocktails, recently came here from Greenwich, Conn., and has a job with the British Purchasing Commission. He has taken a house on Twenty-eighth Street in Georgetown and it was there the function took place.

Mr. and Mrs. Renchard were both at the party; also John Renchard, who will be best man for his brother. Guests gathered in the large upstairs living room of the house, which is one of the few Georgetown residences of modern design.

Miss Stapleton wore a brown and white spring print and a corsage of gardenias. Justice Frank Murphy chatted with friends from Detroit here for the wedding. Miss Eleanor Flood wore a dark purple suit and had tucked a red flower in her hair. Miss Diana Rowland dashed in late, wearing a smart black ensemble. Mrs. Lewis Clark and Mrs. Theodore Achilles arrived together. Others glimpsed were Mr. and Mrs. George Wheeler, Miss Mary Wright, Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Mrs. William T. Mann and Miss Emily Davis, who was in a navy blue dress with a white pique collar.

U. S. to Suggest Defense Roles For Women Soon, She Predicts

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Suggestions are likely to come soon from the Government as to ways in which women can coordinate their volunteer service for national defense, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday, and she predicted the suggestions "may seem not very thrilling," but urged the women to give them serious consideration.

"Think them over," she said in an informal talk before the Seventy-fourth Club at a luncheon given in her honor at the Carlton Hotel. "Try to get groups in your community to carry them through if, on investigation, they seem needed in your community. One of the first things the Government should have," she added, "is a list of women by counties and States, showing what their capacities are and what they would be prepared to do if the need arose. This would let anyone know, in any part of the country, in case of fire, flood or any other emergency, what was available in woman power."

Remarking that she had some friends who were learning to shoot, Mrs. Roosevelt said she had learned shooting as sport years ago and thought it was great fun, but "not a national defense measure at present."

"The things that mean something in defense of the Nation are dull, uninteresting work," she told the women. "We are one big community—citizens of the United States of America. If things are not going well in any part of the United States, it is up to us to find out why, put our shoulders to the wheel and do something about it. It is your problem, wherever you live."

She urged upon the women the realization of their responsibility for keeping up the morale of the home, the community and the country, and "looking without fear at a future you no longer can foresee, but with assurance you can meet whatever you are required to do." Health and nutrition were two of the foremost problems to which women should give attention, she said.

Mrs. Charles A. Halleck, wife of Representative Halleck, of Indiana, presided at the luncheon and introduced the First Lady. Ignorance Hinders Cooperation Among Americas, Zontians Told

The most insidious enemy of inter-American friendship is inter-American ignorance, Dr. Earl N. Bressman declared yesterday in an address at the weekly luncheon of the Zonta Club at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Bressman, who is assistant director of the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations in the Department of Agriculture, spoke on "Inter-American Cooperation." Inter-American ignorance, he said, "applies not only to our lack of knowledge concerning things Latin-American, but equally to the need for better acquaintance of the Latin-American nations with each other. There are many important differences within the Latin-American family, both in backgrounds and interests. We are often inclined to overlook these differences because of the many similarities than exist and to generalize on Latin America and to lose sight of the fact that we are dealing with 20 distinct nations."

"In examining the subject of hemispheric cooperation," he said, I like to start with the proposition that our cooperative program will deal with Latin-Americans as human beings having problems and aspirations similar our own. After all, inter-American relations cannot exist in a vacuum. They are nothing more nor less than the sum total of individual human relationships—yours and mine—with individual Latin Americans, he said. The material and spiritual benefits which you and I confer and receive in our dealings with Latin America shape the real foundations for genuine Pan Americanism.

"From the human standpoint, the recognition of individual differences is basic to success in obtaining closer toes between the countries of the Western Hemisphere. While all Americans, like other civilized peoples, regardless of nationality, have more or less the same basic instincts, they differ in many respects. These differences, usually stemming from cultural heritages, which go deeper in a human being than any other influence, make international understanding exceedingly difficult to achieve, even when other obstacles are overcome.

"We must frankly recognize that these psychological barriers exist, rather than try to gloss over or belittle them. A partial explanation of the ineffectiveness of most Pan-American efforts in the past can be found in the failure to take this point under consideration. To avoid similar mistakes in the future, we must learn more about what our neighbors in other countries think and why they think as they do."

Mrs. Nan Street, president of the club, presided at the meeting.

Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona, and Elinor Lee, of radio station WJSV, have been added to the list of speakers for a meeting at Pierce Hall, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets, this morning at 10:30, to discuss defense speaking. The meeting, called by Mrs. Hugh Butler, is open to all who are interested.

Hahn, of the Office of Education; Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association; Mrs. George Rublee, who will speak for the American Women's Volunteer Services; Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens, chairman of the District Red Cross committee on publicity through speech and radio; Dr. Florence Armstrong, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, speaking from her South American experience; Mrs. George Maurice Morris; Mrs. Henry Clement, and Mrs. A. E. Barton, who will give a sample defense speech.

Schools to Get Placement, Guidance Unit

The Board of Education yesterday authorized the appointment of two persons to serve as head of a department of guidance and placement for the District public schools system, one for white and one for colored pupils.

Their term of office will extend until June 30, 1941, with their salaries coming from a favorable balance of $11,369 in the current budget. One teacher in each of the senior high schools also will be appointed to serve temporarily as counselors in guidance and placement, the board determined.

It also was recommended that assistant principals be appointed for ten Washington junior high schools having enrollments of more than 1,000 pupils. The assistant principals would serve in a temporary capacity until June 30, 1941, to aid principals in routine administrative work.

Summer school will be held this year from July 1 to August 8, it was announced. Because of a holiday, Friday, July 4, sessions will be held Saturday, July 12 and Saturday, July 19.

Miss Mildred Green, teaching principal at the Blake School, was promoted to administrative principal of the Henry-Polk School, by action of the board. Miss Bertha E. Taylor, administrative principal of the Henry-Polk School, was transferred to the administrative principalship of the Addison-Curtis-Hyde School.

The new colored high school to be located at Twenty-fourth Street and Benning Road Northeast will be named for the late Dr. Joel Elias Springarn, who contributed greatly to interracial understanding.

Conliff Named Asst. District Attorney Here

John C. Conliff, jr., was appointed an assistant district attorney for Washington yesterday after 13 years on the district attorney's staff. His appointment was announced by District Attorney Curran after being approved by Attorney General Jackson.

CONLIFF

Conliff was born in Washington, the son of the late John C. Conliff, who was in the music business. He was graduated from Central High School, and got his bachelor degree from the Washington College of Law. He was admitted to the bar in 1928. The following year he received the degree of Master of Laws.

Introduced New System

Entering the prosecutor's office as a clerk in 1928, Conliff became secretary to District Attorney Leo A. Rover, who made him chief clerk in 1931. Conliff introduced a modern system of records, which showed the condition of every case in the office for any day, thus enabling the district attorney to have direct up-to-date knowledge of his docket.

As Conliff made a summary yesterday, his records showed that 289 criminal cases were awaiting trial in the District Court. There were 52 persons in jail awaiting trial. Conliff's system immediately reflected the addition of 47 cases by the indictments presented Tuesday. The total a year ago was 88; a few years ago totals of 500 or 600 were common.

Was Pine's Assistant

In his regime as chief clerk Conliff has seen the work of the prosecutors increase from about 1,200 cases a year to more than 1,900 last year, keeping pace with increased population.

When David A. Pine, now a District Court justice, became District attorney in 1938 he named Conliff a special assistant and placed him in charge of extradition proceedings. Conliff became an expert in this branch of the law.

D. C. Income Taxes Expected to Show Gain Over 1940

Employes of the District tax collector's office labored yesterday to compute the city's annual return from the income tax and the amount of first-half payments.

Tax Collector Guy Pearson estimated that approximately $779,388 has been collected and counted thus far. The contents of more than a dozen mail bags remain to be sorted and tabulated, he said.

Last year's receipts amounted to $3,258,000 and Pearson predicted the returns this year would exceed that figure by "several thousand."

"TO NEGLECT DEFENSE IS TO INVITE DISASTER"

Forward March!

A message to General Motors folks everywhere

RECENT events have made it shockingly clear our country faces a peril that threatens to engulf all that we have and hold dear.

That peril is known. We need not define it. But we do need to define the obligation which it places upon the shoulders of every one of us.

That obligation is first of all to get done as fast as can be the vast defense task upon which the nation is engaged, and to stick at it regardless until we do get it done.

In assuming its share of that task, General Motors has in good faith taken responsibility for the production of defense orders totaling about $750,000,000.

It has done this with confidence in the loyal cooperation of its employes, and has undertaken to spread production as widely as possible for the local benefit of cities where its plants are located.

The millions of people fighting for freedom throughout the world look to America as the arsenal of Democracy. They pin their hope on America's productive power. And our machines are futile without the willing hands of men to run them.

In this crisis, every hour counts. Every hour moves us closer to the day when defense materials will flow to our embattled friends in Europe in volume enough to swing the scale.

This is no time to falter, to hesitate, to let our effort be weakened or encumbered by differences which can be settled in discussion by reasonable men.

At a time when your country is asking for sacrifice, can anyone justify seeking selfish advantage at the cost of production?

Certainly General Motors wants no special advantage of any kind.

It seeks only to go ahead now with its duty to the free people of America and the free people of the world.

We all hope our country shall never itself need to wield the weapons we are building and will build in increasing volume.

But the best assurance against this is for us to go forward as Americans who stand inseparably together in order to get this defense job done.

For the defense of our country, an idle or even an inefficient factory is today no better than a bombed one.

OEM to Operate Lend-Lease Program

Lend-lease administration will be placed under the Office of Emergency Management. It will be put on the same plane as Office of Production Management, Price Control and several other defense agencies. White House administrative experts are understood to be drawing up an executive order for the President to sign which would officially place lend-lease under OEM. Meantime, OEM already has started to service lend-lease. Money, supplies, space, and personnel for lend-lease must be cleared through OEM. President Roosevelt is personally OEM chief and his liaison officer is William H. McReynolds, an administrative assistant. OEM is set up like a holding company for the other defense agencies. It's a service organization and has no power over policy, as yet.

Lack of office space is holding up formation of the lend-lease agency. Officially, lend-lease has no employes or funds and it won't have until the President signs an order setting up the agency. Actually, however, lend-lease has about 25 employes, all borrowed from other agencies. It has a few offices in the Federal Reserve Building.

The lend-lease bill gave the President $10,000,000 for lend-lease administrative expenses. The sum is sufficient to hire a vast number of employes, but apparently there will be few lend-lease workers. It's planned to set up lend-lease as a sort of super administrative agency and to use employes in other agencies to do the actual spade work. Officials say it will be several weeks before any number of new employes will be hired. Meantime, space and money must be secured.

Defense List Grows

It's news now if a Federal agency isn't on the list of defense agencies. The list has now grown to more than 125 departments, agencies and bureaus. There are very few more left to get on the list. Every agency wants to be on the list, if for no other reason than to protect its personnel. Nondefense agencies are constantly being raided of their personnel by defense bureaus. An employe can't transfer from a defense agency without the approval of the agency. Defense agencies also can hire persons on the replacement list.

Even St. Elizabeth's Hospital has been made a defense agency. The Civil Service Commission agreed to place it on the defense list when hospital officials pointed out that they were losing an excessive number of nurses and attendants. It was also argued that Public Health, Navy and Army hospitals were among the defense agencies and there is no doubt that all the hospitals will have more work to do as a result of the emergency.

Other new defense agencies: Farm Security, Social Security, Alley Dwelling, GAO, Employes' Compensation, RFC and its five subsidiaries, Defense Homes, Defense Supplies, Defense Plant, Rubber Reserve and Metals Reserve; Wage and Hour and solicitor's office in the Labor Department, some employes in the secretary's office and Disbursement Division at Treasury, and the following division at Interior, secretary's office, personnel, information, General Land Office, Grazing Service, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the National Parks Service.

John Carmody has set up a Division of Investigation in his Federal Works Agency. He has consolidated the investigative work within Public Works, U. S. Housing, Public Buildings, and Public Roads and has put it under a single division. Division chief is George H. Butler, former director of the PWA division of investigations. His first Federal job was elevator operator in the Senate Office Building. WPA will continue to make its own investigations. Carmody made it plain that the new division will not investigate personnel. The Federal Works administrator has authority to consolidate and others mergers are expected.

F. B. I. has taken over the old Wardman Building at 1437 I Street. Its local office will be there. Justice is now scattered in nine different buildings . . . Unskilled workers are paid an average of 50.6 cents an hour by Uncle Sam . . . Farm Credit's personnel office has been made a separate division and Ted Wilson has been made chief.

McCarran's Stand Results in Plea For More Funds For Senate Group

Informed that Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, hesitated to accept the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee because of inadequate personnel assigned to the committee, the Southwest Citizens Association last night urged the Senate Steering Committee to provide the necessary funds.

Harry Wender, association president, said that in an interview yesterday afternoon, McCarran revealed he would not take on the District Committee duties unless he was satisfied he'd get ample clerical help to maintain a full-time office. Secondly, McCarran said, he'd have to be sure the District residents wanted him to become the "mayor."

The resolution suggests funds for a clerk and assistant clerk, to be selected from among District citizens.

The association voted to set up an information and activity liaison with the Southwest Civic Association in a move to bring about closer cooperation between the white and colored organizations. The Federation of Citizens Association was urged to recommend similar liaison among its members and to undertake similar cooperation with the Federation of Civic Associations.

The Citizens Federation also was requested to create a committee which would act to organize a permanent federation office and obtain funds for a permanent paid secretray.

District authorities were asked to add $50,000 to the annual appropriation for education of handicapped children; to place five more laboratory technicians in the Health Department, and to maintain night operation of the tuberculosis and venereal clinics at the Southwest Health Center.

Chevy Chase

"The Nation needs the people of the District with the ballot in their hands," Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart (Republican), of California, last night told more than 200 members of the Chevy Chase Citizens Association.

Only by being given the right to vote can the District cease being the "neglected stepchild" of Congress, the Representative said. He pledged his support in the pending Sumner-Patton bill giving suffrage to Washington.

The association authorized appointment of a committee to work with the Commissioners and the War Department in planning District defense measures.

Members voted approval of the proposed merger of the police and municipal courts on the ground that it would speed up handling of cases and save money in the court system. They opposed entry into the new Municipal Assembly, calling that body a "complete duplication of the work of the Federation of Citizens Associations."

16th Street Highlands

An analysis of the crosstown bus lines was given last night by D. J. Locke, staff engineer of the Capital Transit Co., before a meeting of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association in the Brightwood School.

The association has requested the Transit company to install a Military Road line which the company opposed on the grounds that it would cost $105,000 a year to operate, a figure in excess of estimated business. The company favored an extension of the Bureau of Standards line through Rock Creek Park.

3,000 Attend REA Open House

Lights of the new Longfellow Building at Connecticut and Rhode Island Avenues Northwest could be seen from as far away as Virginia last night as the Rural Electrification Administration held open house to show off its new quarters.

Harry Slattery, administrator, and REA staff members were hosts to some 3,000 visitors, including members of Congress, who looked at movies, exhibits, square dancing and playlets, listened to music and ate ice cream and cake.

Norelli Reappointed to D. C. Pharmacy Board

Norelli received indorsements from the George Washington University School of Pharmacy, of which he is a graduate; from the pharmacy board, itself, and from various civic leaders.

3. GILBERT WHITE, a picture of concentration, strains to get message through on mental wave length, then record his impression

Twenty-five psychology students at American University spent two and a half hours in concentrated thinking yesterday afternoon, when they participated in an experiment in long-distance extra-sensory perception.

Briefly, the idea was for the students to attune their minds to the thoughts of three participants in New York, some 225 miles away.

Basis for the experiment was S. J. Woolf's "Here I Am," a collection of word-profiles and sketches of 25 nationally prominent personalities.

At the Museum of Science and Industry, Rockefeller Center, New York, an experimenter would concentrate on a particular chapter; at the same instant, in the American University laboratory, the 25 students were directed to let their minds wander over the book, with which they had familiarized themselves, and "when the impression became irresistible," to name the chapter. Each test lasted two minutes and was checked by telephone.

Prof. John E. Bentley, who conducted the experiment, would not divulge the results of the experiment, which was one of a series. He plans to publish his conclusions when the series is completed.

Chinese Is 25th Auto Victim; Hit-and-Run Suspect Held

VAN HITS UNDERPASS STANCHION—The driver and another occupant of this heavy truck were pinned in the cab of the vehicle last night when it crashed into a steel support of the underpass at Seventh and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Both men were removed and escaped without serious injury.

A Chinese resident died in Garfield Hospital last night, the District's twenty-fifth traffic fatality of the year.

In other traffic developments yesterday, police seized a Lorton parolee as a hit-run driver; a 2-year-old child was hurt seriously when struck by an auto; two men were pinned in the cab when a truck crashed into an underpass upright, but escaped serious injury.

Wong Shee Duck, 45, of 910 New York Avenue Northwest, was struck by an auto Tuesday while crossing the 800 block of Upshur Street Northwest, and was taken to Garfield Hospital suffering from a fractured skull. Police listed the driver as Samuel L. Cooper, 23, of 4309 Second Street Northwest.

A 21-year-old parolee from Lorton Reformatory was arrested as the driver of a hit-run automobile which seriously injured a 9-year-old bicyclist Tuesday. Traced through his license tags, the youth was arrested at his home in Southeast, and allegedly admitted that he struck George Schanke, 9, of 1610 H Street Southeast, at Fourteenth and S Streets Southeast. He said he fled the scene because he was afraid the accident would affect his parole.

Police identified the suspect as Washington's "pants burglar" of 1939. Records show the youth was sentenced to serve between 6 months and 4 years on 46 housebreaking charges on May 12, 1939. He was released on parole March 13, 1940. Last night detectives were questioning the youth regarding other housebreaking cases.

Two-year-old John W. Thompson, of 236 Second Street Northeast, was seriously injured late yesterday when he was struck by an automobile as he crossed C Street Northeast at Second.

Police said a car driven by Eleanor G. Lee, 45, of Port Washington, N. Y., knocked the child down when he darted out from between parked automobiles as she made a right turn into C Street. The boy was taken to Casualty Hospital with head and possible internal injuries. He was unconscious.

Harold J. Duncan, 37, of Richmond, suffered a compound fracture of the right leg, and Rex Sander, 27, also of Richmond, received minor injuries to the face, when their truck crashed against an upright of the underpass at Seventh Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Firemen had to extricate the men from the truck cab.

William Berkley, 74, of 1858 Ingleside Terrace Northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital with head injuries yesterday when hit by a truck, which police said was driven by Alfred D. Peters, colored, of 3319 Sherman Avenue Northwest.

Church Hailed As Bulwark Of America

Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of Catholic University and Bishop of Bilta, last night hailed the Catholic Church as a "bulwark against the terrible sedition in the ranks" of the American people at a testimonal banquet in his honor at the Williard Hotel.

"The Catholic Church is a solid guarantee ranged on the side of the principles upon which this country was founded," the cleric said at the dinner sponsored by Washington Knights of Columbus.

The bishop said that with an athestic "nation fallen beyond the power of reclamation" Catholics in this country stand "millions strong . . . for the Nation's welfare" and against irreligion.

"We have a power to give wholehearted allegiance to the safeguarding of America" through religious faith, the speaker said, "and if we allow anyone to take it away from us it is our own fault."

Leo A. Rover, former United States attorney, praised Bishop Corrigan as "personifying virtues of charity, unity, and patriotism . . . a militant feature of Catholic philosophy."

He declared that Catholic University and the Knights of Columbus organization had grown up together and now exerted a "powerful influence for "salvation of men's souls and the welfare of the Republic."

Other speakers included Francis P. Matthews, of Omaha, national supreme knight; Luke E. Hart, of St. Louis, national supreme advocate, and Daniel J. Callahan, national supreme treasurer.

Hackers License Board Post Goes to Collins

Police Inspector Maurice Collins yesterday was named by the Commissioners to succeed Inspector William E. Holmes, who recently retired, as a member of the Board of Review of Hackers Identification Licenses.

Capt. Harvey Callahan, commander of the First Precinct, was named as alternate. Nominations for the positions were made by Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown.

Nearly 500 Attend Opening Of Club's Narcissus Show

BLOSSOMS OF SPRING—Anna Margaret Park, 14 (left), and Evelyn Park, 16, both of 213 Van Buren Street Northwest, admire some of the exhibits in the twenty-sixth narcissus show of the Takoma Park Horticultural Club, which opened last night in the Takoma Park branch library

A riot of yellow with the exhibit of thousands of narcissus at the Takoma Branch of the D. C. Public Library, Fifth and Cedar Streets Northwest, attracted nearly 500 flower lovers as the Takoma Horticultural Club opened its twenty-sixth annual narcissus show last night.

The show which marks the first of the spring flower exhibits sponsored by the club, will be open today from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

Dr. Edwin C. Powell, of Aspen Hill, Md., captured the blue ribbon for the best flower in the show and the club's certificate of recognition for his exhibit of 60 named varieties and 24 seedlings. It was a yellow trumpet seedling measuring 4 inches in diameter that was judged the best bloom. It also won first place in its class. Surprised at the award Dr. Powell had forgoten from what group of seedlings he selected the bloom, which is unnamed.

Million Boost Asked in D.C. Welfare Fund

Bondy Stresses Needs Due to Defense Plan And Rapidly Growing Population of Capital

More than $1,030,000 in additional welfare funds will be needed by the District next year because of defense projects and the city's rapidly growing population, Director Robert E. Bondy, of the Bureau of Public Welfare last night told more than 100 delegates to the Municipal Assembly.

Bondy added that "at least four of our welfare institutions" should be completely rebuilt to do an effective job, listing the industrial home schools, the Training School for Girls and the Home for the Aged.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant director of the Health Department, told the delegates a public health center in the north central area is "one of Washington's greatest health needs." He pointed out that most of the city's communicable and venereal diseases come from this area and the infant mortality rate is more than twice of that of the city as a whole.

Preventative work carried on by the Health Department costs 95 cents per capita, where $2.50 per capita is usually considered the minimum for municipal safety, he said.

Dr. Robert Haycock, first assistant superintendent of the Board of Education, cited as the greatest school need the allotment of funds for additional schools and repair of present facilities. Repair funds have not increased materially for 10 years, while more than $12,000,000 in new schools have been added, he pointed out.

Sefton Darr was elected president of the assembly. Other officers, named last night, are Ernest H. Pullman and Dr. Doxey Wilkerson, vice presidents; Mrs. Lois Sentman, secretary; Harold Vatter, treasurer; Dr. Ernest Griffith, Sidney Katz, Woolsey Hall, Hugh Miller and Mrs. Harold Stone, board of directors.

Bandit Trapped While Working An Old Trick

Isaac Cassell, proprietor of a liquor store at 1709 U Street Northwest, outsmarted a bandit who tried to work the old trick of " . . . and send change for $20" last night and a 24-year-old colored man landed in jail.

Cassell became suspicious when a man telephoned an order for whisky, ginger ale and beer and asked that change for $20 be sent to a third-floor apartment at 2109 Eighteenth Street Northwest. So Cassell called Thirteenth Police Station.

When the delivery boy, Ralph Jennings, delivered the order, Detectives B. D. Crooke and F. M. White were hiding on a landing between the third and fourth floors.

A gunman held up Jennings and took the money, whisky, beer and ginger ale. Whereupon the police appeared and took the gunman, including his loot.

Last Inning—Two Out, Nobody On—Then Balls Start Going Over Fences

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, April 16.—After a slight delay, due to only two Red Sox home runs that merely tied the score in the ninth inning, the Nats succeeded in losing their third straight ball game here today. The end came, mercifully, in the twelfth, before any of the Nats' three relief pitchers were killed. The final score was 8 to 7.

Pete Fox singled to center field against Arnold Anderson to drive home the winning run for Boston with one out in the twelfth, but that blow, my friends, was merely an anticlimax. The big doings had been staged back there in the ninth inning when the Red Sox went story bookish with the Nats leading 7-4, two out and nobody on base.

Whatever the Venezuelan version of punk pitching may be, Alex Carrasquel served it up at that point. The Nats were leading, 7 to 4, with two out and no Red Sox on base, as we were saying, when Carrasquel stubbornly refused to win the ball game.

Homers Tie Score

He walked Joe Cronin with two out, and then he pitched a home run to Bobby Doerr, whose clout over the left-field wall cut the Nats' lead to 7 to 6. Carrasquel's next act was to pitch another home run to Jim Tabor, which tied the score. Tabor took an angry swing and lined the ball over the left-field wall to send the 5,300 customers into hysterical delight.

Big Jim Dean finally got the side out, but he was in trouble in the tenth, when he filled the bases with a pair of walks, and Anderson was called into the game. Big Anderson averted any damage in the tenth and also survived the eleventh, but in the twelfth he dug his own pitfall.

Anderson hit Dominic DiMaggio in the belly to start the twelfth inning and after Finney sacrified DiMag to second, Pete Fox, the old Detroit outfielder, lined a single over Travis' head and the Red Sox had the ball game. It was pretty awful.

Sad part of it was that Roger Cramer was mixed up in a losing cause. Cramer, who is frank in his dislike for Red Sox Manager Joe Cronin, came to bat in the eighth with the Nats trailing 4-3, and the bases full. With a glint in his eye, Cramer walloped a triple to deep center field and drove in three runs that put the Nats ahead of his old pals, 6 to 4.

Masterson Goes to Eighth

Walter Masterson went as far as the eighth inning for the Nats and did a tolerably good job of it despite the eight hits he allowed. The Nats were trailing, 4-3, when he retired in favor of a pinch-hitter in the eighth. It was in that inning that the Nats knocked out young Charley Wagner, Cronin's starting pitcher.

Ironically, the Nats outhit the Red Sox, 16 to 13. And Buddy Lewis produced Washington's first home run of the season back in the fifth inning when he lined the ball into the right-field stands near the foul line.

Preakness Draws King Cole, Curious Coin

Owners Post $1,500 Each For Entries

Value of Pimlico's Historic Race Upped To $65,500; 56 Now Eligible for Stake

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 16.—King Cole and Curious Coin, two of the Nation's top 3-year-olds, joined 54 other thoroughbreds today on the list of eligibles for the Maryland Jockey Club's historic Preakness Stakes to be run at Pimlico May 10.

Ogden Phipps, owner of King Cole, and Coldstream Stable, owner of Curious Coin, planked $1,500 each on the line to make their horses eligible as supplementary entries and boost the present value of the 1941 Preakness to $65,500.

This sum led Maryland Jockey Club officials to predict that the fifty-first running of this race would offer a gross value in excess of $70,000 and well above the record $69,700 set in 1940. Each starter must pay $500 additional and Alfred Gynne Vanderbilt, the Jockey Club president, expressed belief that more than ten would face the barrier.

Winner of Paumonok

King Cole's stock took a jump skyward by his impressive triumph in the Paumonok Handicap at Jamaica last Saturday, and Owner Phipps and "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, his trainer, hurried along the supplementary fee. The colt long had been regarded as a serious threat for the 3-year-old title.

Curious coin, a dim star in the 1940 2-year-old scramble, won his way to 3-year-old prominence by brilliant performance during the Hialeah winter meeting. There he finished second by a head to King Ranch's Dispose in the Flamingo Stakes.

Besides Dispose, other outstanding thoroughbreds King Cole and Curious Coin may meet in the Preakness include Wheatley Stable's Bold Irishman, Woodvale Farm's Our Boots, Charles S. Howard's oPriers Cap, Calumet Farm's Whirlaway, and Greentree Stable's Monday Lunch and The Rhymer.

"Fits" Has Two Horses

The entry of King Cole gives the veteran Fitzsimmons a strong hand, for already he is prepping Bold Irishman, winner over Our Boots and Whirlaway in the Pimlico Futurity last November, for the Preakness.

Supplementary entries first were added to conditions of the Preakness in 1938, but no one of 14 horses that have been made eligible by this means has captured top money and custody of the famed Woodlawn Vase. Thus King Cole and Curious Coin have a chance to break tradition.

Buddy Lewis Leaves for Army in May

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, April 16.—Third Baseman John Kelly (Buddy) Lewis of the Nats early in May will say his farewell to big league baseball for at least a year. He is being drafted into the United States Army, he learned today from his selective service board in Belmont, N. C.

"Lewis is now available for immediate military service," the board stated coincident with the announcement that he was being placed in the 1-A class.

A few days ago, The Washington Post was told by W. B. Crumpton, secretary of the North Carolina draft board, that Lewis would be inducted with a batch of selectees scheduled to leave Gastonia on May 10, if he were class 1-A.

Team's Leading Hitter

The blow, though not unexpected, falls heavily on the Washington club. Lewis has been the team's leading hitter in the three games thus far, and today he produced the Nats' first home run of the season. He has been playing an errorless game at third base, and is the only player deemed worthy of the clean-up htting job in the Nats' line-up.

Manager Bucky Harris, who heard the official report of Lewis' draft status immediately following his club's third consecutive defeat today, was downcast. 'Now isn't that just fine," said Harris in mock joy. "It ought to fix this team up just great. Holy catfish!"

Lewis, seemingly unperturbed by the draft board's decision, which jerks him out of his $12,000 salary with the Nats and puts him in the Army at $21 a month, said he planned no appeal.

Takes It Philosophically

"I'm Private Buddy Lewis, and that's all right with me," the player said. "This is a duty I'm not going to shirk."

Apparently the North Carolina board paid no heed to Lewis' claim for deferment on grounds that he was the support of his aged parents. Baseball, however, does not represent Lewis' only income. He owns a revenue-producing gas filling station, and 10 acres of the 14-acre farm he bought for his parents are under production.

Lewis thus becomes the first notable American Leaguer to be swept into the Army by the selective service laws. Other players in the league already have been drafted, but they have been obscure players. Lewis has a lifetime batting average of more than .300 with the Nats. He hit .317 on the club last season.

Manager Harris declined to say definitely what plans he had to meet the emergency of Lewis' absence from third base. "The situation will have to work itself out, I guess," said Harris.

Bloodworth to Third

Indications were, however, that Harris would make two shifts in his lineup in an attempt to offset Lewis' absence. He is expected to promote Cecil Travis, leading hitter on the club last season, to the cleanup hitting job held by Lewis, and to put into effect a new infield plan.

Jimmy Bloodworth will doubtless move to third base after Lewis' departure, with the veteran Buddy Myer playing second. However, against left-handed pitching, it may be Harris' plan to use Jimmy Pofahl at third and restore Bloodworth to second.

Bloodworth demonstrated during a brief trial last year that he is an acceptable third baseman. Pofahl also is at home at the position, but his erratic throwing arm is one of Harris' worries. In any case the Nats will sorely miss Lewis' batting power.

White Sox's Wright Is "Much Better"

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—Taft Wright, Chicago White Sox outfielder who was threatened by pneumonia last week, said today that he was feeling "much better" and believed there was a chance that he might be able to leave the hospital about Saturday.

Wright, whose home is in North Lumberton, N. C., was stricken late last Saturday with a recurrence of the respiratory illness which attacked him three weeks ago at the Sox training camp in Pasadena, Calif.

Trosky and Weatherly Provide Homers As Cleveland Takes 6-to-0 Game

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 16.—Southpaw Al Milnar limited the Chicago White Sox to two singles today as Hal Trosky and Roy Weatherly lined homers over league park's short right field wall to give the Cleveland Indians a 6-to-0 triumph.

The Cleveland southpaw, who turned in 18 victories last season, was in top form. The only blows made against his awkward delivery were consecutive fifth-inning singles by Larry Rosenthal and Mike Kreevich with two men out. Milnar walked only one batter—Kreevich—and had one strikeout.

Meanwhile Trosky and Weatherly teed off against Edgar Smith, the Chicago mound starter, to give the Indians an even break in the series. Trosky's fourth-inning clout also tallied Ken Keltner, who had walked, and Lou Boudreau, who singled. Weatherly's drive in the next stanza also brought home Milnar, who had been passed on four straight pitches.

Phils' Joe Marty Placed in Class 1-A In Selective Draft

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 16.—Joe Marty, star center fielder of the Phillies, received notice from the draft board at his home in Sacramento, Calif., today that he has been placed in class 1-A and should be ready for immediate call for Army training under the Selective Service Act.

MARTY

Marty already has passed his physical examination. In answering his draft questionaire, he claimed no dependents although he helps support his father, whose legs were amputated because of an infection.

Obtained from the Chicago Cubs two years ago, Marty hit better than .350 in exhibition games this spring and clouted a home run for the Phils' first score against Boston yesterday.

Cards Score 2 Runs in 9th To Beat Reds

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 16.—Morton Cooper pitched five-hit ball today, fanned seven and led the St. Louis Cardinals to their second straight victory over the champion Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 2.

Johnny Vander Meer, on the hill for the Reds, allowed seven hits and whiffed eight, but issued six passes. Backed by a superb infield defense, however, he was in serious trouble only once—the eighth.

Bases are Loaded

Then two passes and an error loaded the bases with none out. Enos Slaughter grounded to Lonnie Frey who hurled to Ernie Lombardi at the plate to force Jimmy Brown and Walker Cooper grounded into a double play to end the threat.

The Cards put across two runs in the second on a walk to Slaughter, Walker Cooper's single, an infield out and Eddie Joost's low throw of Frank Crespi's grounder.

But the Reds evened things in their half when, with two away, Jim Ripple dropped a Texas-league double into short center, Harry Craft walked and Joost atoned for his miscue by blasting a double to score both.

Otherwise, the world champions were helpless.

Crespi Doubles

With Vander Meer fanning five of six men to face him between the third and fifth, it wasn't until late that the Cards could break the spell.

Then, with one out in the ninth, Crespi doubled to the scoreboard, Mort Cooper beat out a roller to third, Herman Triplett batted for Koy and got on base when his ball struck Chespi, automatically retiring him. Johnny Hopp ran for Triplett and scored behind his pitcher on Brown's two-bagger to right.

Beantown's Buzzing

Boston, April 15.—As for the administration offices in Fenway Park, folks, the joint is jumping. Matters are not at all serene in the club offices that catacomb the rafters, where Owner Tom Yawkey and General Manager Eddie Collins direct the destinies of the Red Sox. They're thinking of firing Joe Cronin, who may beat them to the punch.

POVICH

Sure, Cronin has four more seasons of a five-year contract to work out, but even at $30,000 a year he isn't describing his job as heavenly. He's somewhat disgusted, we learn. Yawkey and Collins don't want him to play shortstop because they think he can't do the job justice and they are also of the mind that he isn't worth $30,000 a year as a bench manager. You'll find more buzzing around the front office of the Red Sox than at most sawmills. The report is that Cronin won't be eased out; he'll be sacked if he doesn't chuck it all and request a contract settlement.

The first five-year contract Yawkey gave Cronin back in 1935 contained an ironclad no-release clause that was widely publicized, but no mention was made of such provision in his current contract. But if Yawkey had to buy up the entire contract at an output of $120,000 that wouldn't deter him. He fired his farm system manager, Billy Evans, by telephone, overnight and paid Evans $15,000 for a contract that had a year to run. Such outlays are probably deductible, anyway, from Yawkey's income taxes. As the director of multitudinous Wall Street corporations, Yawkey pays considerable taxes.

The situation is very much on Cronin's mind. In fact, it has left him haggard. In previous years, he has had to battle against weight, but this week finds him underweight. He's been dieting to keep down his poundage and show his bosses he can play shortstop, but they aren't convinced. Cronin normally is a hefty eater and he is punishing himself. And the knowledge of the goings-on in the front office which may reach a decision any day aren't contributing to his comfort. Cronin knows something is stirring.

Cronin Gets Bronx Cheer

Matters began to crystallize when Cronin was booed during the intra-city series here last week between the Red Sox and the Bees. The razzberries directed toward Cronin came chiefly from Bees' fans, but they reached the ears of the Red Sox bosses, who saw an excuse to fire Cronin. With the Red Sox having flopped dismally for the past few years, Yawkey and Collines feel the need of a bold step.

Deserved or not, Cronin has a reputation for mishandling pitchers. At any rate, the Boston pitching for the past few seasons has been disgraceful. The Red Sox bosses know it, keenly. They might tie that situation in with Cronin's discharge.

Last winter at Chicago, Cronin talked frankly about continuing to play shortstop. It's up to Yawkey whether I'll play or not," he declared. A few days later he got the green light from the club owner. But Yawkey's enthusiasm for Cronin has cooled.

Yawkey's enthusiasm for Cronin reached its highwater mark in the summer of 1939. The Red Sox, with Cronin starring, slapped down the league-leading Yankees in five straight games at Yankee Stadium. The gleeful and impulsive Yawkey promptly announced that Cronin's five-year contract which was to expire at the end of the season was being renewed with another five-year agreement. As long as I'm owner of the Red Sox, Joe Cronin has a job as manager," said Yawkey at the time.

But Rich Man Yawkey's fondness for Cronin cooled somewhat when the Red Sox finished some 15 games behind the Yankees. Yawkey cools off quickly. He spent two weeks hunting with his 1934 manager, Bucky Harris, after the close of that season, and a few days later Harris picked up a Washington paper to read, to his amazement, that he was no longer in Friend Yawkey's employ—that Yawkey had bought Cronin for $250,000 from the Washington club to be a playing manager.

It Was an Inspired Deal

It was on a sudden inspiration that Yawkey bought Cronin. He was attending the 1934 World Series and saw Mickey Cochrane lead the Detroit Tigers into the series. "That's what I need, a playing manager like Cochrane who can inspire my club," said Yawkey to Eddie Collins, "where can I get one." Collins suggested Cronin, and Yawkey humored his whim by simply buying Cronin for a quarter million dollars.

In that 1934 season, his only year as the Red Sox manager,

Bobby Jones to Watch Son Make Tournament Golf Debut

Young Bobby to Play in Southern Prep And High School Tourney at Chattanooga

By the Associated Press

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 16.—Bobby Jones, who hoped his son never would become a tournament golfer, will be in the gallery here May 1-2, watching the debut of Bobby Jones 3d.

Young Bobby, a strapping 6-foot, 190-pound lad of 14, is entered in the sixth annual Southern Prep and High School Golf Tournament with the team of Marist College, Atlanta, where he is a high school student. It will be his first try in tournament competition.

It was just a quarter century ago, in 1916, that 14-year-old Robert Tyre Jones, jr., won the Georgia State Amateur championship. The same year he qualified for the National Amateur championship in Philadelphia, led the field for the first half of qualifying play and won two matches before losing to Bob Gardner, of Chicago, in the third round. Seven years later, at the age of 21, he won the United States Open championship.

Electric Gate Will Start Derby Field First Time

By the Associated Press

Louisville, Ky., April 16.—The Kentucky Derby field will be started on its momentous journey May 3 from an electric gate—for the first time in the 67-year history of the 3-year-old classic.

Col. Matt J. Winn, generalissimo at Churchill Downs, said today there would be 18 stalls provided for—12 in the regular gate and a 6-stall auxiliary gate.

Winn said that "Ruby" White would start the Derby field. White recently was named to succeed William Hamilton, who had sent 15 Derby fields on their way and who resigned to accept a post with the Illinois racing commission.

Philadelphia Routs Three Yankee Hurlers to Win, 10 to 7

Siebert's Two Homers Help Potter Score

DiMaggio Pounds Out 4 Hits but Yankees Lose 2d In Row to Macks

By the Associated Press

New York, April 16.—The Philadelphia Athletics teed off on three of four Yankee pitchers today to take their second straight victory over New York, 10 to 7.

Dick Siebert, once a Yankee farmhand and at various times a chattel of other major league clubs, hit two home runs and a single and Bob Johnson notched one homer as the A's rolled up 13 safeties against Marvin Bruer, John Murphy and Steve Peek.

Nelson Potter, who stayed the route for the Athletics by scattering ten hits, gave New York two runs in the first on a walk and successive doubles by Tom Henrich and Joe DiMaggio and let the Bombers score in six of the nine innings. But the A's took the lead with five runs on six hits in the sixth and never were headed, although DiMaggio got his fourth hit, a homer, in the ninth.

Salvo's 3-Hit Hurling Beats Phils for Bees

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 16.—The Phillies' offense bogged down before Manuel Salvo's three-hit pitching today as Boston's Bees evened their series at one all with a 4-to-1 victory before a slim crowd of 2,516.

Boston sewed up the game in the first inning when successive singles by Sebastian Sisti, Carvel Rowell and Gene Moore, a hit batsman, an infield out and Eddie Miller's long foul to left field accounted for three runs.

The Bees capitalized on their only other hit off Ike Pearson in eight innings when Moore's triple scored Sisti, who had reached first on Merrill May's error. Roy Brunner pitched the ninth and allowed one hit after Pearson was taken out for a pinch-hitter.

Giants Down Dodgers, 3 to 1, 2d Straight

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 16.—On a combination of Harry Gumbert's steady six-hit pitching and defensive lapses by the Dodgers, the New York Giants made it two straight over their Brooklyn neighbors today by a score of 3 to 1.

The Dodgers were leading, 1-0, and Kirby Higbe had retired the first two to face him in the fifth when Gumbert singled and Johnny Rucker walked. Burgess Whitehead then drove a grounder at Pee Wee Reese, the Dodger shortstop fumbled the ball, and the bases were loaded. Harry Danning smacked the first pitch into center field, and two runs were in for the ball game.

Cookie Lavagetto's second error of the afternoon, also with two out, enabled Mel Ott to reach third in the eighth, from where he scored on Billy Jurges' single to left for the Giant's third run.

Ex-Sweetie Shows "Love"

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Narcotics, which has done a wonderful job of hounding the conscienceless practice of doping race horses, was startled recently by the visit of the irate former sweetie of a nationally known six-day bike rider. She asked that her former friend and the new love of his life be apprehended as addict and peddler, respectively. Seems that the rider's new lady love had brewed him a formula which stimulated him like a leaky roof circuit selling plater. And that because of the speed-giving formula he gratefully became her beau, ditching the girl who was brought up to believe that inspiration wasn't a matter of stirring a little cocaine into equal parts of canned heat and nitro-glycerin.

CONSIDINE

The bureau is looking into the matter in a routine way, but it doesn't expect to find that it leads to other cases where athletes are being stimulated to great deeds by narcotics. It has no thought of giving Buddy Feller the saliva test, though it has heard and made inquiries into reports that certain football coaches are not averse to hopping up their players with something more stimulating than a die-for-dear-old-Siwash pep talk and that certain track coaches are "interested" in the fact that a heroin-treated horse is 6 lengths per mile faster.

What we'd like to see the office of Harry J. Anslinger, the country's greatest authority on narcotics, do is to get to work on the so-called "freezing" practices engaged in by even the fanciest of racing stables. It may not come under the Harrison Act, but "freezing" certainly is at least an ugly cousin to more vicious practices.

"Freezing" is the term used for giving temporary relief to this or that ache which is stabbing at a thoroughbred. In the case of a cracked hoof, a quantity of ether often is poured into the break and it is then taped very tightly. Challedon was treated this way just before he beat Kayak II and Cravat in the Pimlico Special two years ago.

It is a legitimate practice, but in the hands of some owners and trainers it can have dire consequences to the horse. Stables whose horses develop sore front legs from over-work have devised a curious "freezing" remedy. They get a pair of overalls and sew up the bottoms of the legs. They put these on the ailing horse, and tie the suspender section around his withers. Then they stuff the pants leg with ice and make the horse wear them until the legs are numb. Then send him out to race.

The horse, deprived of nature's warning pangs, can easily break a leg by putting too much pressue on a badly hurt but insensitive member. The horse can't tell how his leg is holding up, because all feeling has been frozen out of it. And not being able to tell, he keeps running, or is beaten enough to make him keep running. Without the "freezing" he would slow down or begin to limp instinctively.

Different Methods Are Used

"Freezing" is also done by sponging the injured leg with ice water for several hours before race time. The stables which go in for this pitiless practice—and which moralize that they do so as a humane gesture to the horse—have become chary about using cocaine to deaden the pain of an ailing leg. Because cocaine shows up in the saliva tests, and the Government has amply indicated that it is the implacable foe of such crime, these stables even hesitate to use legal novacaine, another "freezing" drug, for fear that it might somehow show up in saliva, though it rarely, if ever does. Icy pants legs and occasionally mud poultices are the common "freezing" devices.

If fighting such practices is beyond the province of narcotic authorities, it should certainly be taken up more actively by the S. P. C. A. The obvious remedy for a sore leg is rest. The obvious obligation to the bettor is that sound horses only be sent to the post. The obvious way to strike at the many cases of horses breaking down, or breaking legs while running, is a thorough expose of "freezing" the legs of lame animals.

While we're dispensing all this dope on dope it might be interesting to add that there soon will take place in New York a court trial involving Joe Bedelli. It is a simple "possession" case, in that Bedelli is charged only with being caught with the junk. But Government and State officials, probing into the bizarre life of the currently incarcerated Italian, have found that he had extensive horse rasing interests and tie-ups with other owners, trainers, jockeys and track officials.

A formula seized at the time of his arrest is being studied by Government chemists now for they believe that the addition of certain citrus juices to the usual dope mixture may have obviated its chances of being detected in saliva tests.

As a result of the Government's investigation into Bedelli's racing interests the Florida State Racing Commission recently ordered the sale of the Snow White Stable and several others owned by Bedelli, through stooges, soon will change hands.

This Morning . . .

Harris landed the club fourth, despite the fact that his ace, Lefty Grove, came up with the first sore arm of his life and won only eight games. Harris put the team in the first division despite also, such playboys as Roy Johnson, Eddie Morgan and Bill Cissell, on whom he never counted until he saw them in uniform at the ball park. That feat, and his personal friendship with Yawkey didn't save Harris' scalp, however.

Yawkey and Collins have done nothing to allay the reports that Cronin counseled the sale of Shortstop Peewee Reese to Brooklyn, where he has become a star. Cronin didn't want Reese around as a challenger for his shortstop job, it was written, and the Red Sox bosses have been letting it go at that. But Cronin recently spoke out in defense of himself. "I never saw Reese play a ball game, so how could I judge him," said Cronin. "The one time the Red Sox were in Louisville, Reese was out of the Louisville lineup with an injury."

There's no popular demand for Cronin's scalp in Boston. The city's baseball press is solidly with him, and the fans go for Joe. He can still hit that ball, incidentally. But the front office feels the need of some drastic step and Cronin is very much on the spot. When and if the Red Sox hit a slump, things are apt to pop upstairs.

Browns Belt Buck Newsom To Win, 8-1

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 16.—The champion Detroit Tigers and Pitcher Buck Newsom made their delayed start in the American League race today by losing, 8 to 1, to the St. Louis Browns, just as they did on opening day a year ago.

It was a good scrap between Bobo and Elden Auker, the Kansas submarine ball ace, until the eighth inning. Then the Brownies broke out in a rash of six consecutive hits that sent Newsom to the showers and netted the home towners seven runs.

Rudy York had tied the score 1-1 with a 425-foot home run in the seventh.

The superstitious will see the defeat as a good omen, however, for both Newsom and the Tigers.

Are You Superstitious?

After his initial loss last season, Newsom won 13 straight games. The Tigers went on to win the pennant, helped in no small part by their 18 victories over the Browns.

Auker, No. 1 hurler of the St. Louis staff, pitched to only 30 batters, 3 more than the absolute minimum. He allowed only three hits in addition to York's homer.

Billy Sullivan was nipped stealing after hitting a single in the third. McCosky walked in the seventh but was wiped out in a double play. Pinky Higgins, who walked in the fifth, and Tuck Stainback, who doubled in the sixth, were the only Tigers left on base.

Newsom was in continual trouble and probably never worked so hard before in his pitching life. The Browns had men on base in every inning except the fourth, when Buck struck out the side.

The attendance was announced as 24,667, including 8,061 paid. The remainder were boys, girls and soldiers admitted free.

Saguenay II Wins at Havre de Grace Track, Pays $68 Mutuel

War Refugee Neck Victor In Harewood

Abrasion Is Second With Woodvale Lass Third; 9,000 Fans View Turf Card

By Walter Haight

Post Staff Writer

Havre de Grace, Md., April 16.—R. Sterling Clark, whose stable of equine "war babies" from Europe has been somewhat of a joke among regular turf fans, sent an entry to the post today composed of Saguenay II, beaten off in seven races last year, and Abbe Pierre, not in the money in eight 1941 starts. To most of the 9,000 present the combination was just another of those scrambled-named horses from the Clark barn.

Abbe Pierre didn't do enough running to keep warm, but Saguenay II more than made up for his stablemate. The 4-year-old son of Aethelstan II, bred in France, amazed the crowd by taking a head lead over J. W. Y. Martin's Abrasion soon after the start of the 6-furlong Harewood Handicap and forgot to quit. He drove into the wire a neck in front of the same Abrasion after fairly skimming the rail from start to finish.

Winner Pays $68

The awakening of the Clark stable proved a boon to those in the crowd who wagered on the entry. A juicy $68 price tag was hung out on the winner. Third money in the field of ten went to C. E. Nelson's Woodvale Lass. To prove his victory was not a fluke, Saguenay II hung up good time of 1:12 4-5.

Apprentice Jockey Herbert Claggett, who has come in for some criticism for his handling of horses at Bowie, had every right to smile and stick out his chest after today's feature. He kept Saguenay II going when almost everybody in the plant believed he would stop.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 16.—Trainer Don Yates, of Baltimore, saddled his third winner of the spring season when he sent Mrs. Veador Leonard's Money Muddle out to wn the first race from 11 other platers operating at a mile and a sixteenth. Apprentice Herbert Claggett helped the 8-year-old turn on the heat in the stretch and he won whole drawing out over Giggle Lee. Meadow Moon was third. Money Muddle paid $9.90.

Double Pays $32.70

Those who coupled Money Muddle with the Mrs. R. H. Heighe entry of Pony Ballet and Sampler in the second race cashed a $32.70 daily double. Pony Ballet was the successful member of the entry, leading all the way to turn back Colchis, Gate Post and nine others in a field of 2-year-olds going the usual 4½ furlongs. Jockey Ira Hanford put up a strong ride on the $6.20 winner.

Making his 1941 debut, primarily came out of the pack in the stretch to win the third race, which drew a dozen sprinters of the $2,500 variety. Representing the Christiana Stable, Primarily held Becomly and Glamor Girl safe under the handling of Apprentice Jockey D. Madden. The winner paid $7.40.

Supreme Speed, like Primarily, making his first start of the year, showed excellent condition and defeated a dozen sprinters in the fourth event. Racing for G. R. Watkins and handled by Jockey Glen Smith, Supreme Speed carried 117 pounds to victory with Circle Wings, the pacemarker most of the distance, in second place, and Irish Moon, making her usual charging finish, third. The winner was a $6.70 shot.

PONY BALLET, first away, set a good pace, drawing clear in the opening furlong, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off the closing bid of COLCHIS. The latter, racing greenly, was off tardily, came to the outside to improve his position and then ducked in to the inside to be gaining on the winner at the end. GATE POST, always close up, moved up menacingly in the stretch and weakened thereafter.

SUPREME SPEED, steadied while within striking distance, was taken wide for clear sailing, responded willingly when asked and drew out gradually in the closing eighth. CIRCUS WINGS, first away, drew clear early, could not resist the winner, but held on willingly. IRISH MOON lacked early speed and closed full of run to be going fastest of all.

SAGUENAY II was sent up on the inside to take command in the opening furlong, saved ground while withstanding repeated challenges from ABRASION and continued with good energy to close under strong handling. ABRASION, off in the first flight, forced the pace on the outside of the leader and fought it out with good energy. WOODVALE LASS was off poorly, worked her way to contention and closed with a bold rush.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:45½. Off at 4:46. Winner, W. J. Hirsch's ch. c. TRAGIC ENDING, well handled, was steadied during the early stages, responded when placed to a drive and held on with good courage in the end. ICE WATER was in the thick of contention from the start, disposed of RIDING LIGHT, but could not resist the winner. RIDING LIGHT came between horses to take command on the backstretch, but weakened under pressure in the stretch run.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:15½. Off at 5:16. Winner, J. A. STING PAL, rated for a half while closest to RUN BY'S pace, took command when asked, drew clear and withstood a long drive to hold FOXSHADE safe at the end. FOXSHADE, under strong restraint to the backstretch, moved up menacingly in midstretch, but hung thereafter. TEDDER moved between horses boldly in the straightaway, but weakened thereafter.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:47. Winner, H. G. DRIFT ALONG worked her way to contention gradually, took command when called upon and won with speed in reserve. SANTIAGO was in the first flight from the start and closed with good energy. LYDE was hard ridden and came willingly at the end. PRINCESS LADY moved up on the rail to dispose of SISTAUR and weakened in the final stages. SLAVIC trailed for three-quarters and closed a gap. Selections at Havre De Grace

Dear Al:

Trainer Charlie Reilly denied that Third Try, O. S. Jennings' horse which bolted into the fence at the first turn in Tuesday's last, was blind. At least Reilly said there was nothing wrong with the horse's sight when he saddled him. The conditioner was of the opinion that Third Try developed "blind staggers." Apprentice Jockey Willie Canning had the horse's head twisted sideways in an attempt to hold him in. Canning suffered a severe leg gash and a possible small-bone fracture in his left leg. Rumba Gus, pet of Gustave Ring, Washington contractor, died of pneumonia Tuesday night following a long illness. The son of Saxon and No Regrets, a handy allowance performer, became ill while being shipped from Florida to Bowie. He showed improvement but suffered a relapse from which he failed to rally. Owner Ring also lost Prince Valiant, a promising 3-year-old, through the same illness just before Bowie opened. Art Brown was here in all his glory yesterday. Goes back in the Capitol Theater today to rebuild the bankroll. Shot Put, Mrs. Marie Evans endurance champion of 1940, arrived at Pimlico yesterday to prepare for his important engagement in the $20,000 Dixie Handicap at this course on May 7. Accompanying Shot Put was his constant companion, Duke, the Great Dane which Trainer Don McEachern occasionally permits to lead Shot Put around while cooling off after one of his gruelling and winning efforts over a distance of a mile and a half or even two miles and a quarter such as he accomplished in the $50,000 New York Handicap last October. The historic old clubhouse at Pimlico, built in 1870 and the symbol of the Maryland Jockey Club in the minds of all who have ever visited the old course, is undergoing its annual spring cleaning. A score of workers are dusting off the famous old racing prints, cleaning down and oiling the fine old stairways and generally refurbishing the Victorian structure. This old building with its bright yellow face is one of the oldest wooden frame structures in Baltimore City. It is the scene, as in days past, of many gay celebration parties following such famous races as the Preakness, Dixie and the Pimlico Special. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—CHALLANTE demonstrated keen form in a sprint here last Tuesday. Appears well placed at this longer route and needs only the right ride. ACTRESS has regained top form and will be a keen factor. BLACK BOO carries high weight of 120 pounds, but is due respect.

Second race—HIGH CELEBRITY is a well-bred youngster with plenty of speed. Seems suited by this maiden company. BRIGHT FINISH raced forwardly but greenly at Bowie and may have enough education to be dangerous. SON ISLAM comes well recommended.

Third race—FIT MISS has been working in excellent fashion and probably is the right one in this rather open sprint. Goes coupled with SEA FEVER as the Jones-Nydrie entry. FLOOD II is good enough to be a threat among these. SPANG for the minor money.

Fourth race—OASIS is a good claiming sprinter and is not overmatched in a field of this sort. Breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of it. REHEARSAL will be closing in the stretch and will be a threat. SKY LANE is dropping down for this.

Fifth race—HANDY TOM handled good ones at Bowie and seems capable of carrying 119 pounds to victory. PETE, JR., was messed about in that last and will be close with better racing luck. OAKMONT is getting ready for the big race Saturday.

Sixth race—STOP LOSS, with 103 pounds and Apprentice Madden to do the booting, will be hard to beat in this company. The route is right. PRIORITY and RING STAR seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—SUN VICTOR comes off a fine 6-furlong effort which probably sharpened him for this distance test. Deserves the top call. TANGANYIKA comes from a magic stable. MEMORY BOOK is as good as those ailing pins.

Eighth race—DARK MAY is tossed in this with feather weight and will make every post a winning one. CANDLE ENDS will be a factor, especially if conditions change. Bedwell's TRANSMITTER and CREEPY MOUSE in the lineup. But your guess is as good as mine.

Best bet—Challante.

University of Michigan Nine Triumphs Over Navy, 6 to 2

Stoddard Hurls For Wolverines; Donald Holman Leads Hitting Attack

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., April 16.—Mickey Stoddard's slow curve baffled the Midshipmen batters for nine innings today and the University of Michigan baseball team defeated the Naval Academy, 6 to 2.

The game was a scorching mound duel until the eighth with the teams deadlocked, 2-to-2. In the eighth the Wolverine hitters chased Lou Luberda, starting Navy moundsman, and sewed up the ball game. In the ninth Donald Holman, fielding and batting star of the contest, hit a home run off the delivery of Capt. Norman Smith, who finished the game for the home club.

Michigan played sensational ball afield throughout the contest, Bud Chamberlain at third and Mike Sofiak at short scooping up many Navy bids for hits, but the outfield saved the ball game. In the eighth, after Michigan had scored three runs, the Tars started a rally of their own. Jackie Stowe and Ben Blue singled in order to open the frame and Jack Brennan connected solidly for what appeared to be a sure home run. However, Holman was off with the crack of the bat and made a running backhand catch of the drive, which would have tied the score. In the same frame, Navy's Hal Harwood drove the ball a terrific distance, but Dave Nelson, already playing deep, made the great catch to frustrate the Middies' last threat.

Wilson High Beaten, 7-3, By W.-L. Nine

Ed Johnson went the route for the Washington-Lee High nine yesterday and his mates enjoyed two big innings at bat to defeat Woodrow Wilson High, 7-3, on the winner's diamond.

Nino Briscuso, starting pitcher for Wilson, hit a homer in the second inning to put the District high nine ahead, 1-0, but the Generals scored two in the fourth and five in the fifth to clinch their second victory in three starts.

Wilson outhit the hosts, 8 to 6, but Johnson was tight in the pinches, fanning 11 and walking only 1. Schwab had a perfect day at bat for the losers, with a triple and single.

Tommy Tailer, Oliver Meet Navy Golfers

By the Associated Press

Fort Dix, N. J., April 16.—The Army accepted with alacrity today a Navy challenge to a golf match and in a carefully phrased communique hinted that the Naval Intelligence Service had bogged down.

Suppre sing a smile, Col. C. M. Dowell, commander of Fort Dix, announced that Private Edward (Porky) Oliver, who in civilian life won fame as a golf professional, and Private T. Suffern Tailer, in the front ranks of the Nation's amateur brigade, would represent the Army in the match with two officers from the Lakehurst (N. J.) Naval Air Station.

"If the Navy has received any information regarding the identity of its Army opponents," the Fort Dix communique read, "the knowledge has excited no official comment from the direction of Lakehurst."

The statement added that Fort Dix officers and men were praising the astuteness of Brig. Gen. Edward C. Rose, who brought back the challenge, and were indicating a willingness to be persuaded into a small wager on the match.

Two of three officers, Lieut. Comdr. George Watson, Lieut. Comdr. R. F. Tyler and Lieut. M. F. D. Flaherty, will tee off for the Navy on April 27 over the Lakewood Country Club course.

Col. Dowell, who as commanding officer has responsibility for the activities of Trainees Oliver and Tailer, made it known that his willingness to grant authority for the two recruits to be absent from Fort Dix on the day of the match was exceeded only by his eagerness to winess the spectacle.

By the United Press

Boston, April 16.—Ten events already scheduled and five others tentatively arranged for the summer P. G. A. campaign will provide a total of $75,000 in prize money for professional golfers, Tournament Manager Fred Corcoran announced tonight.

The United States Open, highlight of the campaign, will be played June 5-7 at Fort Worth, Tex., the first time in history this medal test has been held in the South. The open carries a $6,000 purse.

The season will open with the fourth annual Goodall round-robin event at Flushing, N. Y., May 22. The P. G. A. championships will be held at the Cherry Hills Country Club, Denver, Ohio, July 7-13.

Red Sox Beat Nats, 8 to 7, In 12 Innings

—but in the third the Nats tied the score after Wagner walked Case and Cramer. Ben Chapman lined into a double play, but Buddy Lewis' infield single and Cecil Travis' one-base drive to right got the run home.

Lewis set Masterson up in a 2-1 lead in the fifth when he lined the ball into home-run territory with none on base. A bit later Travis singled and Myer doubled down the left-field line, but Travis was out trying to score when Cronin made a perfect relay to the plate.

The Red Sox moved in front, 3-2, in the same inning after Masterson had two out. Foxx singled against the left-field fence, Cronin made his third straight hit—a double off the left-field wall—and Doerr followed with a single.

In the sixth, the Sox moved out in front, 4-2, on singles by Frankie Pytlak and Pete Fox, and in the seventh the Nats got a run back when Chapman singled to center and Travis tripled to deep right.

Washington drove Wagner out of the box in the eighth after Ferrell beat out a hit to Tabor with one out. Bloodworth went in to hit for Masterson and walked, and the bases were filled when Case beat out a hit to Tabor. In this crisis, Cramer gleefully lined a sharp triple between the outfielders to the center-field wall and moved the Nats in front, 6-4.

Myer Singles

As a precautionary measure the Nats boosted their lead to 7-4 in the eighth when Myer opened with a single against Tex Hughson, a rookie right-hander. Myer went to second when DiMaggio fumbled the ball, and scored on Rick Ferrell's single against the left field wal.

Thereafter, Left-handed Mickey Harris hed the Nats in check while the Red Sox beat the daylights out of Washington's WPA relief pitching.

ACKERMAN

Harold Wells is a Miamian first, last and always, even though he has been here with David Lawrence on the United States News for the past three years. He's a fisherman, too, on his own say so, but we haven't had any actual proof of the fact. Considering his accomplishments here in Chesapeake Bay waters, and the 40-odd minutes it took him to fight a bucket to the boat on his vacation last year at Miami, we have had reason to be doubtful.

However, it looks as though he might be all that he says; that it takes more than one swallow to make a summer and more than one or two trips back to the hometown to prove his worth.

So far as we are concerned from now on he is a fisherman, for on Monday he accomplished more than all the thousands of Washington anglers who have fished this winter in the current Miami Fishing Tournament. In fact it appears as though he will bring home the bacon—the palm leaf—or to be exact, about $100 worth of fishing tackle and an outstanding achievement citation—for catching the largest white marlin of the tournament and the season.

Harold's fish weighed 123 pounds, topping the best fish to date for the species by 7½ pounds, and last year's winner by a pound. With only a few more days to go, there is little chance that a better one will be brought in.

We are gratified because he caught such a swell fish, that it was from Capt. Lev Raymond's Lev-Lou, the boat on which so many Washington anglers fish at Ocean City every summer—that it will probably place a local fisherman in the final standings. In fact we're happy about the whole thing.

Fishing right now in southern Florida waters is top-notch. Big dolphin are running off Miami Beach so that it is almost impossible to troll a sail or marlin bait, while below, the big tarpon are thick in the passes. This week at Bahia Honda Channel two women anglers caught a pair weighing 140 and 170. Nice fish in any country.

All trout streams in West Virginia will be open to anglers, starting at 6 a. m., April 26, when the 1941 season officially opens.

For five days fishermen will be allowed to fish all waters except parts of five streams, which are noted in the booklet that goes with every West Virginia license. That is true even of the small headwaters and feeder creeks, but on April 30 the fishing on these smaller waters will end for the year. On all normally open trout waters the season continues through July 9.

Nearly 100,000 yearling trout have been stocked in the larger streams—45,000 rainbows, 40,000 brookies and the balance browns.

Eastern Routs Episcopal High, 24 to 10

Eastern High School opened up with 8 runs in the first inning yesterday in routing Episcopal, 24 to 10, on the latter's diamond. Pitcher Neblett, of Episcopal, failed to last the frame as he issued 6 walks.

Neblett was followed on the mound by Dabney. Eastern got to him in the sixth, scoring 7 runs.

The winner's batting attack was led by Centerfielder Laycock and Shortstop Vernon, both getting 3 for 5.

Frank Wideman collected two homers for Episcopal, one coming in the eighth with 2 on. Maloney, also of Episcopal, got 3 singles.

New Haven Board Wins Proxy Fight

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., April 16.—An independent group of stockholders conceded defeat today in their proxy fight to unseat the present 15 directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and elect a new board dedicated "to give wholehearted support to the stockholders" in the system's reorganization proceedings.

At the railroad's annual stockholders' meeting, the group turned in proxies which it said represented 491,491 shares of common and preferred stock whose holders preferred a new directorate. There is a total of about 2,070,000 shares in the railroad outstanding.

After ballots were cast, Edward G. Buckland, chairman of the board, announced that the result of the voting would be announced Saturday.

In his message to shareholders, President Howard S. Palmer reported that the first quarter of 1941 "will show a net income of about $415,000 based on present capital structure," and promised to be "the best first quarter since 1921."

It was the railroad's largest stockholders' meeting in more than a decade, with about 150 attending.

Curtiss-Wright Corporation

Guy W. Vaughn, president of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, told stockholders at the annual meeting in Wilmington present earnings were "very satisfactory" based on tax laws now in effect, but the future had to tell its own story.

"We are having a harvest now," he said. "But the day of reckoning is coming. The company is preparing for the worst. If it does not happen we will be that much better off."

Curtiss-Wright is abreast of its schedule or ahead on all production contracts except three experimental jobs, he said.

Westinghouse Air Brake Co.

The current backlog of Westinghouse Air Brake Co. indicates high operations throughout 1941 but earnings will be affected by taxes and any rise in material costs, George A. Blackmore, chairman, said at the annual meeting in New York.

He estimated earnings in the first quarter at $2,105,362 after allowing $1,414,080 for estimated Federal income and excess profits taxes. This would be equal to 66 cents a share, compared with actual earnings of $1,847,140, or 58 cents in the first quarter a year ago.

Directors declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable June 15 to stock of record May 15. The same amount was paid March 15.

Phelps Dodge Corporation

Phelps Dodge Corporation expects to spend about $24,000,000 for improvements and other requirements in 1941, Louis S. Cates, president, said at the annual stockholders meeting in New York.

In the first three months of 1941 Cates estimated Phelps Dodge earned about $3,700,000, equal to 73 cents a share after all charges and taxes. At the annual meeting a year ago he estimated earnings in the initial quarter of 1940 at $2,412,000, or 48 cents.

Crucible Steel Co.

F. B. Hufnagel, chairman of Crucible Steel Co. of America, told stockholders at their annual meeting in Jersey City the company's net profit for the March quarter was $3,044,270, or $5.90 a common share, compared with $1,193,156, or $1.74 a share, in the like 1940 period.

Blaw-Knox Co.

Blaw-Knox Co., reporting earnings on a quarterly basis instead of semi-annually for the first time, announced a net profit of $584,653 for the first quarter of 1941. This figure did not include a loss of $36,194 reported for American Gas Service Co., unconsolidated domestic subsidiary.

Owens-Illinois Glass Co.

A dividend of 50 cents a share payable May 15 to stockholders of record April 16 was announced by directors at the annual meeting of stockholders of the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. The statement for the 12 months ended March 31, 1941, showed a net profit of $7,297,003.41 or $2.74 per share as compared to $8,884,066.38 or $3.34 per share in the previous 12 months period.

Columbia Broadcasting System

Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., reported net profit for the 13 weeks ended March 29 of $1,487,686, or 87 cents a share on combined class "A" and "B" stocks, compared with $1,284,331, or 75 cents a share, for the like 1940 period.

William S. Paley, president, told stockholders at their annual meeting in New York he saw no signs of weakening in the company's commercial broadcast schedules.

A. T. & T. Head Expects Record Gain in Telephones This Year

By the Associated Press

New York, April 16.—Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., told stockholders at their annual meeting today the big communications concern might show a gain of as much as 1,500,000 telephones in service this year, "50 per cent more than in any previous year."

"We have never yet had a gain of as much as 1,000,000 telephones in a year," Gifford said, noting that 1940's gain of 950,000 was the greatest on record.

"But," he said, "if the present rate of growth should continue throughout the year, we would gain nearly 1,500,000 telephones. In any case, a gain of well over 1,000,000 looks certain."

Long distance calls, Gifford said, are running about 25 per cent above a year ago, and some days the increase has been as much as 35 per cent.

Toll Calls Set Record

"That is a percentage increase in one year," he said, "which we would normally expect might take place over a period of two or three years. Actually we are now handling on the average more long distance calls every day than we did during the unprecedented peak period of traffic which we experienced in September, 1939, when the European war broke out."

Gifford told shareholders the profits report for the first quarter of this year, made public yesterday and showing net of $63,165,413, or $3.38 a capital share, were probably not indicative of results for the entire year.

"Costs are increasing," he said, "wages have recently been increased pretty generally, the margin of excess plant capacity is being used up and will have to be restored, and taxes are almost certain to be increased substantially."

Expenditures to Rise

Increased traffic, Gifford said, would necessitate expenditures of about $400,000,000 for new construction this year, or about $110,000,000 more than in 1940.

Gifford rapped the Federal Communications Commission for its recent order bringing a formal proceeding for rate reductions against the Bell System companies.

He said he particularly regretted the commission should see fit, "especially at this critical time, to depart from the practice which it has followed in the past of handling rate matters by informal conferences—a procedure which the commission has noted in its annual reports and public statements has been productive of results without the necessity of formal legal proceedings."

Gifford's reference to "critical" times followed a review of the company's contribution to the defense effort.

600 Camps Equipped

He said telephone installations had been made or were under way in some 600 camps, bases and other defense works and that the telephone cable alone installed for this purpose was over 1,250,000 miles—"enough to wrap around the earth 50 times."

Of strategic materials needed for defense, Gifford said: "We have had for some time a group . . . at work on substitutes for such critical materials as aluminum, nickel, zinc and magnesium, all of which are used in telephone apparatus.

"We have pledged to the Priorities Division of the Office of Production Management in Washington that we will make every effort to reduce our use of such materials even at some penalty in cost and effectiveness. It is not a simple matter, but we have already made some real progress, and we hope to go further. . . ."

ICC Authorizes Combine of Bay Shipping Lines

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Baltimore Steam Packet Co. yesterday to acquire the properties of the Chesapeake Steamship Co.

Both companies operate between Baltimore and Hampton Roads Ports in Virginia. The Chesapeake company also operates a service from Baltimore up the York River to West Point, Va.

The Packet company's application, which was not contested, said there was not sufficient business to permit profitable operations by both companies.

The Packet company will pay the Chesapeake company $900,000 in 50-year debentures for its properties. The Chesapeake company, in turn, will exchange the debentures for 50 per cent of the Packet company's capital stock.

March Gold Imports Show Slight Increase

By the Associated Press

March gold imports totaled $118,569,342, or $10,000,000 more than in February. This figure, still far below the average of preceding months, was reported by the Commerce Department yesterday in an announcement noting a decline in shipments from the British empire. March imports included $95,621,000 from Canada, $6,262,000 from Australia, $2,664,000 from South Africa, $3,985,000 from the Philippine Islands, $3,046,000 from Japan, and $2,232,000 from Colombia.

Soybean Trade Displaces Corn In Chicago Pit

By the Associated Press

Chicago, April 16.—Soybeans, youngster among the Nation's farm crops, graduated into the big league of grain trading today. In a move symbolic of recent developments in the grain business, Board of Trade officials transferred dealings in beans, which recently have been breaking all records, to the corn pit. Trading in corn futures henceforth will be done in the beans pit, which only recently was doubled in size.

In its new quarters, the exchange's soybeans trade ranks second to that of wheat, displacing corn, which for years has been the No. 2 commodity on the trading floor from point of volume of transactions.

Pit brokers commented that the rising trade in beans and the declining operations in corn reflected developments in market conditions. Although beans production in the United States last year amounted to less than 4 per cent of the volume of corn harvested, traders said, industrial uses for beans have been increasing steadily.

Due partly to increased industrial activity associated with the rearmament program and to wartime demand for fats and oils, the price of soybeans has risen almost 30 cents a bushel since the first of March and now, at above $1.20 a bushel, is the highest since late in 1939. This price is more than a dime higher than a year ago and gives beans a value more than 50 cents a bushel higher than that of corn.

Trading in corn futures has fallen off sharply, and at times recently has been the smallest on record.

Volume of futures trading in beans the first half of April totaled 51,000,000 bushels, compared with 31,000,000 the first half of March and only 5,000,000 the first two weeks of April last year.

Federal Agency Outbid in Chicago Cash Egg Market

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—Efforts of the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation to purchase eggs in the cash market of the Chicago mercantile exchange were unsuccessful today as the trade out-bid the Government agency.

Making its first appearance in the exchange's cash market since March 4, the Government agency bid 22½ cents a dozen for storage packed first eggs and 22¾ cents for storage packed extras. The trade took offers at 22¾ for storage packed firsts and 23 cents for extras, a gain of ¾ cents over yesterday's prices.

Activity of the Government agency in the cash market had a bullish influence upon futures trading on the Chicago exchange. October futures soared 45 points to 24.15 in active trading.

Steels and Rails Lead Late Recovery After List Dips to New Lows for Year

New York, April 16.—A late upturn in steels and rails put the stock market today on the road toward a recovery from the decline accompanying the Balkan War.

After numerous shares had dropped to new lows for the year, including United States Steel and Bethlehem, the rally took hold. "Big Steel" finished with a net gain of 1¼ at 52¾ while crucible spurted 3, ending at 39.

Final prices were mixed, however, with utilities continuing on the downgrade as selling persisted in some holding company shares under the shadow of SEC "integration" plans. United Gas Improvement, on a fractional drop, hit the lowest price recorded this year after the Securities Commission ordered the company to get rid of nine units.

Official disclosure Crucible Steel earned nearly $6 a share on the common stock in the first quarter against $1.74 in the initial period last year apparently aided other steels as well as Crucible. Nevertheless, brokerage circles made much of a threatened squeeze against profits as result of rising operating costs and higher taxes.

Motor shares dipped into new low ground for 1941, then joined steels and rails on the rebound. Chrysler ended ⅝ higher and General Motors was unchanged.

Rail loadings last week were estimated to have shown a further decline as result of the coal strike, but the longer outlook was judged by analysts to be for improvement in traffic. Santa Fe was up 1 at the finish and New York Central, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred rose fractions.

Transactions totaled 437,460 shares against 453,400 in the previous session.

Rail bonds made a move to get in step with the rally in stock. Commodities steadied, finishing narrowly uneven for the most part. Chicago wheat was off ¼ of a cent a bushel to up ¼. Coorn was ¼ to ⅝ higher. Cotton futures closed unchanged to 5 cents a bale lower.

In the curb market, Heyden Chemical, McWilliams Dredge and Sherwin-Williams were off fractions to about 1, offset by small advances in Lake Shore Mines, Brewstetr Aircraft and Glen Alden Coal. Turnover was 60,000 shares against 75,000 yesterday.

Chain Stores' Share of Retail Sales Lessens

By the Associated Press

Independent stores increased their share of retail sales between 1935 and 1939, the Census Bureau announces.

The Bureau said that independent stores boosted their proportion of total retail sales from 73.3 per cent in 1935 to 74.7 per cent in 1939. The share of chain stores, meanwhile, declined from 23.3 per cent to 21.7 per cent. Other types of stores, increased their proportion from 3.4 to 3.6 per cent.

The report showed that in 1939, 6,213,890 persons were employed in retail trade. Of these, 1,602,937 were proprietors of independent stores, 2,803,145 were full time employes, and 519,302 were part time employes. Unpaid relatives working in stores were not counted.

Chain stores employed 1,121,476. Other types of retail stores employed 132,822 full time and 26,574 part time employes.

Chain stores did most of the business only in one line, variety stores, which were 86.8 per cent chain operated in 1939. Chains did 49.7 per cent of retail shoe store business, 45.1 per cent for automobile accessory stores, and 41.4 per cent of the business done by dairy products stores. In sales of electric appliances, stores owned by utility companies did 47.1 per cent of the business. In the retail liquor trade, State-owned liquor stores accounted for 42.5 per cent of business.

Independent stores did 67 per cent of the grocery business and 77.9 per cent of the filling stations were independently owned.

Outlook Favorable, Says Borden Co. Head

New York, April 16 (AP).—Profits of the Borden Co. showed improvement in the first three months of the year due mostly to a better showing made in large fluid milk markets, Theodore G. Montague, president, said at the annual stockholders meeting.

"There is some increased demand in our export business," Montague said, "and the Federal Government has recently indicated it will require very substantial quantities of cheese and evaporated milk under the lease-lend program."

Two Boys, 9, Held As 'Saboteurs'

Irvington, N. J., April 16 (AP).—Police hunting "saboteurs" in a $1,000,000 fire which destroyed foundry patterns, some owned by firms with defense contracts, disclosed today that two 9-year-old boys were the culprits.

Police Sergt. Edward J. Durning recalled that boys had been stealing metal from the Barnett Foundry & Machine Co. before the fire. Two of 250 lads who were questioned admitted to police they had lighted a fire in a pail for illumination while exploring the shed which housed the patterns and sparks flew. Because of the culprits' age, no action will be taken.

Presumably jugglers, acrobats, trained seals and card trick experts won't have much of a chance, but otherwise "Talent Tournament," the new C. B. S. network show which you'll hear over WJSV at 8 tonight, is to be devoted to giving likely vaudeville acts an opportunity to make themselves heard and known as well as earn some good money.

"Talent Tournament," which replaces the quiz program, "Ask-It-Basket," for the same sponsor, will continue having Humorist Ed East as master of ceremonies. Each week five sets of entertainers will be heard from—singers, dancers, comedians, musicians, and what have you. The Nation's listeners will be asked to vote by letter for their favorite act and the winner, or winners, will receive a prize of $200 and a repeat engagement on the following week's program. Incidentally, however, everyone who takes part in the radio show will be paid a standard performer's fee.

After five acts have been selected by listeners there'll be a final contest among them to determine who gets a grand prize, again to be determined by the Nation's listeners, and by that time all of them will be doing pretty well in a financial way. A 16-piece orchestra, directed by Charles Hathaway, is to provide music for the program.

We are assured that anyone with a flair for entertainment will be eligible to compete in "Talent Tournament," but suggest you listen in for further details at 8.

The Post Radio Highlights

11:15, WOL—Members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors are heard in a forum discussion at their annual convention, with Brian Bell, of the Associated Press, as moderator.

Sid Houston, War Veteran Editor, Dies

Sid Houston, 47, associate editor of the National Tribune, war veterans' publication with headquarters here, and first department commander for Missouri of the American Legion, died yesterday at his home in Upper Marlboro, Md., after a brief illness.

Mr. Houston was the son of Algernon S. and Mrs. Sally B. Houston, both deceased. He was educated in the public schools of Mexico, Mo., where he was born, and the University of Missouri.

After working on the staff of the Kansas City Star, he enlisted in the 137th Ambulance Company, Thirty-fifth Division, in June, 1917. He served as chief clerk in the division surgeon's office at Camp Doniphan, Okla., until his unit went overseas in 1918.

At that time he transferred at his own request to Company B, 128th Machine Gun Battalion, Thirty-fifth Division, with which he later participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Mr. Houston joined the staff of the Stars and Stripes, A. E. F. publication, in Paris in November, 1918, remaining there until June, 1919. Returning to this country he became first department commander for Missouri of the American Legion.

He came to Washington in 1920 to rejoin the Stars and Stripes, serving on its staff until 1925, when the newspaper was merged with the National Tribune, veterans' weekly.

Mr. Houston was a member of the Upper Marlboro Post of the Legion, the Potomac Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, and the National Press Club.

He leaves a brother, Frank Houston, of Kansas City, and two sisters.

Mr. Houston's body will be taken to Mexico, Mo., today, leaving here at 1:50 p. m. from Union Station. Although funeral arrangements have not been completed, the services and burial will be tomorrow or Saturday, friends said.

Arson Suspect Will Join Army If Not Indicted

Wilson E. Everhart, 19-year-old Bethesda youth charged with arson and attempted arson in three incendiary fires, will not return to the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School where he is a senior, but will join the Army if he is not indicted, his mother said yesterday.

The youth, who lives at 4413 Montgomery Avenue, is charged with setting a fire at the high school he attended and in a vacant house near his home. He also is charged with attempting to set fire to a hardware store on Wisconsin Avenue. He is free on $1,000 bond awaiting a preliminary hearing May 13.

The school fire on February 27 caused $15,000 damage to the roof of the building. John G. Adair, jr., Chevy Chase fireman, was killed by an automobile while battling the blaze.

The youth was a member of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department at the time of the school fire and helped to fight it. He has since resigned.

In a statement reportedly made to police, Everhart admitted stuffing newspapers in the eaves of the school roof and setting them afire. Afterward, police said, he went home until he heard the alarm and then left to join the other firefighters at the scene.

His mother, Mrs. Stanley E. Everhart, said the youth apparently "just had a mania for fires."

Another Bethesda volunteer fireman, Paul J. Voight, 22, also is awaiting grand jury action on a charge that he set fire to a grass plot in Somerset, Md., so he could ride on the fire engine.

Reutt Charged In Norfolk Ship Mate's Death

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., April 16.—Maryland placed a manslaughter charge against Ray Reutt here today in the disappearance of First Officer Harry B. Murphy from a Washington-Norfolk steamer Sunday night and the former Virginia Military Institute football player and wrestler made known through counsel that he would fight extradition.

REUTT

The Virginia charge of murder against the 24-year-old athlete was dismissed at the same time.

The Maryland warrant was presented to Police Justice Clyde H. Jacob by Sheriff Robert B. Cooksey and State's Attorney Edward J. Edelen, both of Charles County, Md. Capt. T. H. Hewitt, of the steamer Northland, reported to Norfolk police that Murphy tumbled from the hurricane deck into the Potomac River, near Pope's Creek, Md., during a scuffle with Reutt.

Justice Jacob explained to the Marylanders that he was without power to act in felony cases, and asked Gordon E. Campbell, Reutt's attorney, whether he would waive extradition. Campbell said no.

The police justice then certified the case to the Norfolk Corporation Court and requested principal witnesses to appear before Judge Richard Spindle of that court May 1. Usual extradition proceedings through the offices of Gov. O'Conor of Maryland and Gov. Price of Virginia will lead to the Corporation Court.

Reutt's original bond of $2,500 was not accepted by Justice Jacob or Judge Spindle, on the ground that the security was not adequate, and Reutt remained in jail tonight—his first night in jail since his arrest late Monday afternoon—in lieu of bond. His first bond, posted after his arrest Monday, was put up by Chris G. Christopolous, of Chesapeake Beach. The amount of the bond was not changed by the justice.

Justice Jacob dismissed in Police Court today the murder charge that had been placed against Reutt by Detective Sergt. H. L. Dickens, and allowed Maryland authorities, who were here for the Police Court appearance, to place their warrant charging manslaughter against Reutt.

There was no testimony of any kind at today's hearing.

Editor Urges 'Humanism' to Combat Wars

The Rev. John LaFarge, S. J., associate editor of the magazine America, called last night for the practice of "humanism" in the United States to combat "the terrific driving force of the inhuman, totalitarian ideas as to humanity."

Addressing the Student Peace Federations of the Catholic Association for International Peace, meeting in their fifth annual conference at Trinity College, he declared:

"Present-day neutrality is destroyed, international obligations are nullified and war is declared and waged not by tanks and submarines alone, but first and foremost by a subhuman concept of man.

Spiritual 'Chute Troops

"The prophets of these subhuman nations are the parachute jumpers in the spiritual assault, and their disguises are considerably more ingenious than those lads in the cartoons who drop from the skies dressed up as old Welsh market women or breviary-reading abbes. . . .

The only way to combat the subhuman idea of man is to build up in thought and particularly in education the integral Christian philosophy of man and to live according to that pholosophy here, in the United States, if we wish to meet the antihuman onslaught from abroad."

J. Joseph Walsh, of the University of Scranton (Pa.), chairman of the federations' national coordinating committee, told the conference that "some kind of European union" is needed for realization of the "so-called dream of universal peace."

Cites Cultural Rights

He said it should be "a union which would embody the protection of cultural rights and which would foster the guidance of economic life in an orthodox manner."

The conference, which ended late yesterday, included discussions by students of such topics as "The Relation of the United States to Europe and European Wars," "A United Europe" and "United States Responsibility for Peace Terms and International Organization."
